THRONG SEES PYROTECHNICS AT MONUMENT

Fess Speaks in Sylvan Theater at Ceremony Preceding Display.

TOURIST THOUSANDS WITNESS FESTIVITIES

Torchlight Procession Is Most Colorful Rite of Day's Program.

POLICEMAN INJURED; CHILD LOST IN CROWD

Police and Boy and Girl Scouts Unite to Keep Situation in Control.

A spectacular display of novel fireworks whose outbursts sounded like a small war culminated the National Capital's celebration of the 154th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence on the Monument Grounds last night.

Thousands swarmed the vast park area under the shadow of the Washington Monument and watched the multicolored outbursts high in the heavens. Thousands more witnessed part of the spectacle from the downtown or even residential sections.

The pyrotechnic exhibition was preceded by a patriotic service in the Sylvan Theater under the auspices of the citizens committee named by the District Commissioners. Under a summer moon the assemblage paid tribute to the creators of the Declaration of Independence in word, song, and pageant.

Fess Speaks at Theater.

On the whole, the city's observance of the holiday was quiet enough save for the scattered reports of exploding firecrackers and several community carnivals. While a large portion of the District's population emulated President Hoover in leaving home for the week-end, thousands of tourists flocked into the Capital to replace them.

Most of the United States representatives were at home or en route there, and a number of senators whose home States are near enough to Washington, took advantage of the week-end holiday before the special session called for Monday.

The weather man yielded to the festive urge and gave Washington an ideal day for its celebration. Clear skies and springlike temperatures made all activities doubly joyful.

Senator Simeon D. Fess (Republican), of Ohio, spoke at length at the Sylvan Theater ceremony on the history of the document for which the anniversary is observed, and then concluded his oration with a detailed account of the plans the George Washington Bicentennial Commission has for 1932.

Declaration Is Read.

The program opened with a concert by the Marine Band under the leadership of Capt. Taylor Branson. E. J. Murphy, chairman of the citizens' committee in charge, presided, while the Rev. John C. Palmer pronounced the invocation.

The park grounds fairly rocked as the huge congregation joined in the singing of "America" under the direction of Maj. Lee S. Tillotson, and a wave of reverence swept the assembly as Dr. W. Hayes Yeager, professor of public speaking at George Washington University, read the Declaration of Independence. William Tyler Page, clerk of the House of Representatives,

Canoeist Drowns Above Key Bridge

Misstep in Attempting to Enter Craft Fatal to David Buell.

Tumbling into the Potomac River when he made a misstep in attempting to get into a canoe, David Buell, 21 years old, of East Falls Church, Va., was drowned shortly before midnight on the Virginia side about one-quarter mile above the Key Bridge.

Buell was said to have been at a camp along the river with a young woman companion and was preparing to make a short trip in the cnoe when the accident occurred. The woman seated herself in the craft and Buell was attempting to join her when an end of the canoe apparently swung out a few feet into the stream. Stepping into the water he immediately sank.

The body had not been recovered at an early hour this morning.

Calvin Coolidge

Says: After a session of about fifteen months the Congress has finally adjourned. It will be subjected to considerable criticism which will be largely useless. With the direct primaries in most States and the popular election of senators, the present perversion of legislation is unavoidable. But the Congress has much of accomplishment. It has reduced taxes, revised the tariff, extended the public building program, made liberal appropriations for highways, adopted a rather ambitious river and harbor bill, and passed a farm relief measure which still is in the experimental stage, but can be made helpful. Prohibition enforcement has been reorganized and a commission appointed to study the general subject of crime prevention.

Even those who criticize its decisions must admit that the record of the House has been dignified and businesslike. It is regaining its former prestige. The work of the Senate with all the ability of its members has been too much impaired by a petty spirit of factionalism and obstruction. The expenditure of money has been too large. Often a combination of senators destroyed party responsibility without substituting any of the virtue of independence. The resulting loss to good government could only be retrieved in part by the House and the President.

THREE OF BALLOONS COMPLETE 40 MILES

Others of 15 Were Expected in Dallas-Fort Worth Region at Dawn.

HEADED IN NORTHWEST

Belleair Speedway, Houston, Tex., July 4 (A.P.).—Soaring along beneath a starlit sky, fifteen balloons contesting in the national elimination balloon race tonight were headed northwestward propelled by a moderate breeze from the southeast.

The Weather Bureau deduced, barring a change in wind, they should pass over the Dallas-Fort Worth region around dawn. Three of the bags, not identified, passed over Huffsmith, Tex., 40 miles northwest of here at 9 p. m.

The fifteen huge envelopes began taking off from here one by one shortly after 6 o'clock tonight. The two entrants traveling the farthest will be declared eligible, along with Ward Van Orman, to represent the United States in the international race starting from Cleveland September 1. Van Orman automatically became the third United States representative by his victory in his international race last year.

Lieut. T. G. W. Settle from the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., who won last year's race, was first to leave. He cleared the field at 6:08 p. m. and an hour and twelve minutes had elapsed before the last contestant, the Army balloon piloted by Lieut. Otto Weinecke, of Kelly Field, San Antonio, and called the City of Houston, picked itself up and floated off far in the wake of Settle.

The veteran aeronaut of all those who came here with hopes of placing either first or second in the competition was left behind. H. E. Honeywell, of St. Louis, remained on the ground, looking longingly after his yellow craft which George Hineman piloted away as a representative of the United Van Service of Cleveland. Honeywell had insisted almost to the last that it would be he and not Hineman in the basket, but in the end he turned the job over to Hineman saying he would be "white about it."

Only a few minutes before he had disclosed with prideful chuckles that

MOONEY, BILLINGS LOSE IN COURT VOTE

California Tribunal, 6 to 1, Opposed to Requesting Issue of Pardon.

BOTH DECLARED GUILTY

Sacramento, Calif., July 4 (A.P.).—Independence Day brought another defeat to Warren K. Billings and Thomas J. Mooney in their long fight for freedom from life sentences imposed for the 1916 San Francisco preparedness day bombing which killed ten persons and injured 40.

The State Supreme Court, in a report made public today voted six to one against recommending to Gov. C. C. Young that Billings be pardoned. The governor repeatedly has said his action on Mooney's pardon plea would be guided by the recommendation in Billings' case.

Gov. Young is expected to make his decision on both the Billings and Mooney pleas next week.

The adverse report brought a smile from Mooney at San Quentin Prison.

"The fight is not yet over," the former labor leader commented. "It has been a long battle and I am never going to give up the attempt to prove my innocence."

Billings, at Folsom Prison, had nothing to say.

Mooney and Billings long have contended they were convicted on "perjured testimony," but the Supreme Court said there was no evidence supporting these charges. The majority believed Billings had received a "fair and impartial trial."

Billings' past and present affiliations make it "fairly inferable," the court said, that he was familiar with plots and plans of the bombing.

"This being so it is an almost irresistible conclusion that if Billings did not prepare and plant the deadly time bomb of the Preparedness Day disaster, he and his assistant and codefendant Mooney knew and have always known who did prepare and plant that bomb and the deadly purpose for which it was prepared and planted."

Associate Justice Langdon dissented, saying "I am not so free from doubt of petitioner's guilt as to withhold a

HOOVER ISSUES CALL TO SENATE FOR PACT VOTE

Upper House Summoned to Meet in Extra Session Monday.

PRESIDENT DRAFTING MESSAGE AT LODGE

CROWDED HIGHWAYS SLOW EXECUTIVE CAR

Few Guests at Summer Camp as Naval Treaty Note Is Being Studied.

(Associated Press.)

A presidential proclamation halted Senators in midstep yesterday and turned them back for a special session to consider the London naval treaty before they could depart for their homes.

Only a few brief hours after they had worked out the last of the legislative snarls that had held them in uninterrupted debate for almost a year, President Hoover issued his proclamation.

Shorn of technical language, it said the public interest required that the Senate convene at noon next Monday to receive a message from the President and consider whether it should ratify the London naval treaty.

President Leaves City.

After issuing the call, the President left the city for his lodge on the Rapidan for the holiday and week-end. While there he planned to prepare his message to Congress.

In the Capital, the hush that followed his proclamation was unbroken by statements. There were quiet preparations, however, by those who will lead the opposing forces on Capitol Hill.

The debate will find an Administration Republican, a Democrat, and a Republican Independent leading the demand for ratification of the treaty. Senators Reed, of Pennsylvania, a Republican, and Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, who aided in drafting the document, will be allied with Borah, of Idaho, a leader of the Republican Independent-Democratic tariff coalition, in behalf of the treaty.

Favorable Report Made.

On the opposite side of the fence, Senators Johnson, of California, and McKellar, of Tennessee, a Republican and a Democrat, will lead the opposition. They, along with Chairman Hale, of the naval committee, base their opposition on the contention that the treaty does not give the United States parity with Great Britain in naval armament.

The treaty itself was favorably reported from the foreign relations

Record Crowd of 35,000 Sees Nationals Beat Yanks Twice

Louis Johnden, Post Staff Photographer.

MAN SLAIN, BODY SET AFLAME IN NEW YORK

Murder Laid to Gangsters; Three Women Linked in Detroit Killings.

RUM TRAFFIC IS BLAMED

New York, July 4 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—In sparsely settled East 141st street, the Bronx, the bullet-riddled body of a burglar known to police as Henry Brinkman was dumped from a stolen sedan early today, and, saturated with kerosene, was fired. When police arrived about an hour later they found in one pocket the plans for decorating the interior of a proposed cabaret in Grand Concourse at an unspecified number and in another pocket one 25-cent piece.

Except for the attempt to destroy the body by fire, it was a typical gang murder. Brinkman had been shot several times through the head and struck once with some crushing instrument. One block from where the body was found was a stolen sedan belonging to Morris Kramer with a nearly empty 5-gallon kerosene can in the back.

On these plans for the cabaret, for which a license to operate such a place had been refused Brinkman more than a year ago police said, were several notations. One was the name of a woman and the address of a movie theater in Southern boulevard. Police located the woman, who turned out to be the manager of the theater, and she told them how Brinkman, the day before had torn his pants in her theater and had demanded a new suit. She had taken his name and the address where Brinkman, it was found, had taken a furnished room two weeks before.

The plans for the cabaret and Brinkman's obvious poverty caused

Jones' 8-to-0 Shutout Is Followed by 7-to-3 Win of Marberry.

Griffmen 1 Point From Lead as A's Divide; Babe Hits 32nd.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

A crowd in excess of 35,000, the largest to ever turn out for a regular season game, was on hand at the Clark Griffith Stadium yesterday to see the Nationals and Yankees start their battle for second place. And in celebration of the day, the home gang set off two giant firecrackers under the New Yorkers in the form of 8-to-0 and 7-to-3 beatings. These triumphs, incidentally, coupled with a Mackian loss in their holiday bill with the Red Sox, ended the fight for runner-up berth for the time being and put the Washington team less than 1½ points behind the league leaders.

There were several of Johnson's charges hanging around with matches in their hands to set off the fireworks. From a pitching angle, there was the veteran "Sad Sam" Jones in the first game and Fred Marberry in the second, while Heinie Manush and Buddie Myer made the biggest blasts at bat. In the opening clash Manush hit two doubles and a single, driving home two runs, while Myer, Rice, Cronin and West played second fiddle, while Buddie Myer made the loudest noise in the second engagement.

The Nats' little second sacker poled out a homer with two on in the fourth frame of the nightcap to enable the Nats to come from behind to a lead and they held this until the affair ended. Babe Ruth previously had delighted the crowd by poling out his thirty-second round-tripper of the year in the first round of this game but, although Myer has not hit enough to start numbering them, his loomed mighty large in the day's proceedings. His blow was a line drive to the angle just to the right of the score board, while the Babe's blow cleared the right-field wall.

Shawkey had to use two pitchers in each game, George Pipgras and Owen Carroll proving no bargain in the first, while Ed Wells, former Nat, and Bill Henderson divided the slab duties in the second. The latter pitched three frames of hitless ball, but the damage had been done by the time he reached the scene. None of the

COMMITTEE MUTINY OVER HUSTON SEEN

Officers of G. O. P. Bodies Said to Have Refused to Meet With Him.

MOSES-GARY CLASH NEAR

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Out of all the war and rumors of war about Republican Chairman Claudius Huston there is developing considerably more than heretofore has appeared on the surface.

Published accounts of the situation as they stood up to yesterday were that President Hoover was on the verge of demanding Mr. Huston's resignation, that in the event he did not do so, that the Republican national committee, or perhaps the executive committee, would be called here forthwith to oust him.

That something is about to happen to Mr. Huston or around him seems quite conclusive. The reports of Mr. Hoover's activities, plans or direct interest in the matter, however, seemed to have been somewhat exaggerated.

As near as can be learned the present blow-off was caused by Mr. Huston's call for a meeting here Monday of the officers of the committee together with those of the House and senatorial committees. Mr. Huston has now postponed this meeting until Thursday.

The reason for this postponement and the reason for the revived reports of his resignation are believed to be due to the fact that the officers of the three committees have refused to meet with him.

Mr. Huston's call for the meeting was for the purpose of formulating plans for the forthcoming campaigns. The retort of those invited has been that there was no need of their coming here to consult with Mr. Huston about anything inasmuch as "he was to be replaced as national chairman."

It has been quite evident for some time that Mr. Huston had no intention of being replaced.

Obviously it is his move now. What it will be no one can safely predict except that it would seem that finally and eventually Mr. Huston must go, regardless of the merits of the controversy about him.

The refusal of the officers of the three committees to meet with him

Sky Harbor Airport, Chicago, July 4 (A.P.).—Twenty-three days from the June afternoon when they roared out of the dust at Sky Harbor—just a couple more would-be endurance fliers, unnoticed by any one except a few mechanics—two Sparta (Ill.) farm boys skimmed down into that same dust tonight to hear thousands hail them champions.

John and Kenneth Hunter had been in the air for 553 hours and 41½ minutes, and even then they were willing to go on, but a clogged screen filter prevented their getting oil and they had to make a hurried landing, touching earth at 5:21:30, Central standard time—more than 133 hours longer than the St. Louis Robin's previous record.

Motor Holds Out.

Their second-hand monoplane still was serving them well at the end, and the motor was still droning out the monotone it had kept up through the long days and nights of flying in darkness and light, in fair weather, in wind and rain.

But the frequent pouring of oil into the engine had clogged up the screen, and, when the last contact was made 5 minutes before landing, no oil would enter. There was no choice but to come down, and they pulled away from the faithful Big Ben, the refueling ship piloted by Brothers Albert and Walter, and swung down to the field.

The holiday thousands, who packed the grounds back of the ropes, became excited, as the sturdy City of Chicago whirred to the hangar. Ropes fell before their onrush and police were helpless before them. So dense was the rushing mob that John, at the controls, had to do a ground loop to avoid hitting them. He taxied off again toward the hangar, with the milling thousands in pursuit.

Crush Around Ship.

All around the ship they crushed, while observers for the National Aeronautical Association battered their way through to get the barograph.

A radio man managed to shove through the pack and hand a microphone into the plane, where the erstwhile coal miners called out their "Hello, world—sorry we couldn't have stayed longer."

Newspaper reporters and cameramen were not so fortunate. They had no chance against that surging, hys-

Alice Garrett to Wed Diplomat of New York

Former Miss Vandergrift Will Be Married Monday in Legation at Dublin; Was Divorced From Keech Partner in Reno.

An announcement of wide interest in Washington social circles came in a dispatch last night from Paris making public the engagement and approaching marriage of Mrs. Alice Vandergrift Garrett, Washington social registerite, to George Anderson Gordon, of New York, Counselor of the American Embassy in Berlin.

The marriage, according to an Associated Press bulletin, will be solemnized Monday at the American Legation in Dublin, where Frederick A. Sterling, American Minister to the Irish Free State, is a close friend of both Mr. Gordon and Mrs. Garrett.

Mrs. Garrett came to Washington as a young girl with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Vandergrift, and was prominent in society for a lengthy period. She made her debut here about a decade or more ago and soon afterward was married to George A. Garrett, widely known in investment banking circles and resident partner of F. B. Keech & Co., here. They separated several years ago and Mrs. Garrett went abroad, where she has made her temporary residence since.

A divorce was granted them several weeks ago in Reno, Mr. Garrett being given custody of their child.

Mr. Gordon is a former Army officer, having seen service on the Mexican border in 1916 and with the American Expeditionary Force overseas during the World War. Afterward he entered the diplomatic service and served as a member of the American delegation to the three-power naval conference in Geneva and to the recent London naval conference, while he was assigned to the American Embassy in Paris.

Wife, Sued for Radio Noise, Ends Her Life

Indianapolis, Ind., July 4 (A.P.).—Mrs. Josephine Dazey, 39 years old, who a few days ago was made a defendant with her husband in a damage suit filed by neighbors on allegations that the Dazey radio was played so loud and so continuously as to be a public nuisance, was found dead in her home today with a bullet wound in her head. Apparently, she had committed suicide.

Her husband, Grant Dazey, said she had been humiliated by the suit and since its filing had been despondent. The suit asked $5,000 damages. A judge took the case under advisement after urging the owners to be reasonable in their use of the radio.

Baltimore Youth is Hurt By Explosive Hurled From Parked Car.

Washington's "safe and sane" Fourth of July caused painful burns to a half-dozen or more persons, two of whom were victims of a pair of "firecracker flingers" making their forays in a small coupe bearing Virginia tags.

A 7-months-old infant, Joseph I. Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson, of 1312 Florida avenue northwest, was severely burned about the chest, arms and head yesterday in the explosion of a large firecracker thrown into their car.

The pair eased alongside in the small coupe, dropped the firecracker in the baby's crib and sped away on the Bladenaburg road near Mount Olivet cemetery. Mr. Wilson gave Irate Customer Follows Alleged "Scalper" to Downtown Area.

Chased from the baseball park by an irate customer to whom he is alleged to have sold for double price third-base tickets near the bleachers, Oscar Herbert Glassman, 24 years old, giving a downtown hotel as his address, was arrested at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue yesterday afternoon by Policeman Harold D. Six other men were arrested near the park on charges of ticket scalping.

When arrested, Glassman was in a taxicab pursued by Arthur Smith, of 1442 Kenyon street occupying another taxi. Smith told police that Glassman sold him two $1.50 tickets for $7 and told him that they were terical throng. It was only by luck that the first "flash," telling of the landing was clicked over the special telegraph wires before the uncontrolable spectators managed to shove their way into the hangar and tear away the wires. They were speedily repaired and the harried writers were able to get their stories of the landing and the subsequent bedlam to the hundreds of waiting newspapers.

Kenneth Much Disappointed.

Ten minutes after the landing, police managed to clear a path and drag the two fliers into an office, where they posed for pictures and had their first chance to relax.

Kenneth, oil-spattered, unshaven, but smiling, said it was a keen disappointment to have been forced down, but added that it would have been too risky to attempt staying up any longer. "We had hoped to keep going at least until tomorrow," he said. "But when the oil screen clogged and the gauge quit, we thought the only thing to do was come down. The oil was spurting back on us pretty bad."

"We sure are tickled to death with our new record, but what we want most right now is a bath and rest."

Neither of the fliers had any definite idea concerning their future. "Just give me a bath," exclaimed Kenneth. "You don't know how much you miss one until you do without for three or four weeks."

He revealed neither he nor John had bathed during the whole time of their flight, although he said they had shaved occasionally.

Cheered by Crowd.

After a brief rest, the two pilots and their brothers, Walter and Albert Hunter, who manned the refueling plane, were escorted to the top of the hangar and introduced to the crowd amid cheers. It was announced they would be taken to a Chicago Loop hotel, for an overnight rest and the crowd was invited to join in an automobile parade to the Loop.

The holiday crowd lost no time in falling in line for the triumph and procession to town.

Kenneth had to borrow a pair of trousers before he could remove his grimy overalls. He explained he had torn the leg from his own pants, to use as a rag.

John, wreathed in smiles, praised the monoplane which carried him and his brother to the new world's record. "The little old motor sure did more than we expected and except for the oil trouble was just as sound when we came down as when we went up."

The brothers complained about losing much sleep in the last few days, blaming the numerous other planes which kept circling near them as they soared around the airport. "We had to keep our eyes open most of the time."

Two Meals Each Day.

The boys said they limited themselves to only two meals a day, in the morning and evening, and said they didn't begin to get used to their aerial meals until they had been up about a week.

They divided the task of piloting the ship, each taking the controls for intervals of from three to five hours, while the other caught a few moments' nap, looked over the plane and performed other necessary duties.

Neither of the boys could give a clear description of their feelings after more than three weeks in the air. "We didn't have a chance to think about how we felt," John said. "The radio was our only recreation."

"There was always plenty to do, with changing oil, cleaning valves, working on the engine and keeping our cabin as clean as possible. We weren't really groggy until today and that was because we lost so much sleep the last few days with all those other planes flying around us.

"You can't blame our landing on anything. That motor is running just as smooth right now as the day we went up. We never even changed a spark plug in it. Just a few little repairs to the oil line will give us a real motor again.

Boys Half Asleep.

"Tomorrow at noon," John added. "I'll be out walking, but I have no other plans, until I get a good night's sleep and see how it feels to have my feet on the ground again."

Both boys seemed sleepy as they talked with newspaper men. They really were sleepy. Questions had to be put to them three and four times before they were fully understood, their drowsiness and partial deafness making it difficult for them to hear.

John said he lost no time in coming down after the trouble developed because he feared he might crack up with the motor spraying oil all over them and the cabin. "I had hoped to drop a note just before we landed, but when the time came to come down, I didn't think it advisable to take any chances."

In the next flight, John said he will have a dual oil screen so that one could be disconnected and cleaned while the other was functioning. And the next flight, he said, will be made just as soon as other flyers equal or beat the record made by him and Kenneth.

Plan Nonstop Trip.

Both John and Kenneth said they hoped to make a nonstop refueling flight around the borders of the United States as quickly as it can be arranged.

John qualified his statements about the future, to make it clear that the record flying may be done by any of the four Hunter brothers. He intimated that in their next trip he and Kenneth might man the refueling plane while Walter and Albert serve as the endurance crew.

The City of Chicago, grimy with oil was nestled in the hangar under a heavy guard against souvenir hunters, while the Hunter boys decided what they would do next and when they would do it.

The record-breaking plane is a second-hand Stinson-Detroiter, powered by a Wright whirlwind motor of 300 horsepower. It is two years old and was built and sold to the C. A. K. Air Lines in 1928 for commercial aviation. After considerable service on that line, it was sold to the "Chicago—We Will" Corporation and used by them in two endurance flights here last fall, each of ten days duration. It had flown approximately 70,000 miles before it went up on its latest flight.

SOUTHERN CROSS COMPLETES WORLD JOURNEY

WORLD HOP FINISHED BY SOUTHERN CROSS

Ship Lands at Oakland After Girdling Earth Within Two-Year Period.

LEADER DETAILS PLANS

Oakland, Calif., July 4 (A.P.).—Wing Commander Charles Kinsford-Smith, with no more worlds to conquer, landed his globe-girdling trimotored monoplane, Southern Cross, at Oakland Airport at 2:36 p. m. (Pacific standard time) today. The plane left Salt Lake City at 9 a. m. (Middle standard time).

Commander Kingsford-Smith was the only member of the crew that left Oakland May 31, 1928, for Australia, the start on a world-circling flight which carried the blue-winged plane into both the North and South hemispheres, and across the South Seas.

Thousands cheered as the great plane dropped swiftly to the field, bearing the flight commander, Radio Operator John Stannage, J. Patrick Saul, navigator, and Evert Van Dyk, copilot.

The party crossed the North Atlantic two weeks ago from Ireland to Newfoundland, where they were forced down for lack of fuel. They refueled and made a triumphal entry into New York June 26.

Project Not Intended.

Although the Southern Cross and Commander Kingsford-Smith completed the aerial circumnavigation of the globe, the commander said he never intended such a project when he and his crew left Oakland and started across the Pacific.

They stopped at Honolulu after a transpacific flight of 2,400 miles; again at Suva 3,197 miles farther across the Pacific, and from there hopped to Australia, completing their 8,700-mile journey June 9. With the commander on this trip were two Americans, James Warner and Harry Lyon, and his copilot, Charles P. T. Ulm.

In April, 1929, Kingsford-Smith with another crew started for London and after being forced down in the Australian bush and for two weeks feared dead, were rescued and continued the trip in a number of jumps.

The flights from London to New York and back to Oakland completed the tour.

Escorted by Pursuit Planes.

The Southern Cross was escorted from Mount Diablo, 25 miles east of Oakland, by pursuit planes.

The fliers were welcomed by Mayor John L. Davie of Oakland and other officials, who escorted them to Oakland, where a reception was held.

Kingsford-Smith set at rest speculation concerning disposition of the famed Southern Cross Fokker plane which has been his flying partner three years.

The commander said he would take the ship to Santa Maria next week and present it to Capt. Allen Hancock, backer of the first flight from Oakland to Australia.

"I am in very much of a hurry to get back to Australia, where I have a wedding engagement in late September," the flier said. "When we dispose of the ship I expect to fly back to New York, take a ship to England and go direct to Australia."

He did not add whether he intended to make the trip from England by plane. The commander said his world flights are over. He will wed Miss Mary Powell in Sydney next September.

The City of Oakland tonight presented him a silver service in aeronautical design as a wedding present. Framed scrolls commemorating their achievement were presented all the fliers.

VICTIM NOT FOUND IN 'DOUBLE KILLING'

"JOKER" IS SUSPECTED

Mystery surrounds an alleged murder and suicide supposed to have occurred at Tilden Gardens, 3041 Sedgwick street northwest, and reported to police by telephone last night by a man whose voice they aver "showed evidence of great excitement."

Whether the mysterious caller may have been a murderer who notified police before taking his own life in a locked apartment, or whether the message was the idea of humor possessed by some "drunk" or moronic jokester, is a problem which the police have not yet been able to solve.

Before he could be questioned, the man hung up his telephone without giving the number of the apartment in which the double tragedy was supposed to have occurred. Police of the Fourteenth Precinct and members of the Headquarters Homicide Squad sped to the scene but had not made a thorough investigation last night.

The police communicated with every apartment from which any response could be had, but did not examine those in which tenants failed to answer knocks or phone calls. It was ascertained that the message was not phoned through the apartment house switchboard, but it might have been made through one of a number of private telephones in the building.

Tenants in the building who were questioned stated they had heard no unusual noises during the evening, and several pointed out that if they heard any shots they probably attributed them to firecrackers. Police have no idea as to the method used by the supposed murderer and suicide, as their mysterious informant neglected to state whether it was a shooting, strangling, poisoning or stabbing case.

FLIER FAILS TO BEAT LINDBERGH'S RECORD

Collins Lands in New York Approximately Two Hours Under Mark.

HEAD WINDS BAR RECORD

New York, July 4 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Bucking stiff headwinds nearly the whole way, James H. Collins, former Army aviator, tonight completed his transcontinental flight from Burbank, Calif., when at 9:03 (E. S. T.) he landed at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, 16 hours and 30 minutes after his take-off, good time for the hop, but not good enough to break Col. Lindbergh's record of 14 hours and 45 minutes.

Cramped from the long ride in his low-wing monoplane, Collins got wearily but cheerfully out of the plane and promised soon to make another assault on the record which the flying colonel established last Easter on a flight with his wife, the former Anne Morrow.

He told of encountering robust winds the whole way and at all altitudes. He tried flying at all altitudes up to 10,000 feet, he said, but without being able to lessen the opposition. "Otherwise," he said, "it was an easy flight."

He skimmed down to an unpretentious landing much to the surprise of the officials, and some 5,000 persons who were about to give him up for the night, after the 7:15 (E. S. T.) deadline for a new record had passed by without a sign of him.

An aerial fireworks display was on when his plane hummed up out of the west and only the usual night lights were on at the borders of the field. As soon as he was sighted the spectators immediately lost interest in the aerial show, landing lights were turned on, and the other planes taking part in the maneuvers politely got out of the way so Collins could land.

Collins lost time chiefly on the first leg from Burbank to Wichita, Kans., where he landed eight hours and a minute from the time of his take-off. It took the Lindberghs only 6 hours and 56 minutes for this first lap. Although behind schedule, Colline nevertheless pushed on in the hope of catching up on the second leg of the journey.

His scarlet, yellow-winged plane is a new type of the Lockheed-Sirius in which Col. Lindbergh made his own flight. It carries only 300 gallons of fuel, however, in contrast with the 450-gallon capacity of the Lindbergh plane. It has a two-passenger cabin and two outside cockpits.

Two Student Fliers Die In Missouri Plane Crash

Neosho, Mo., July 4 (A.P.).—Two student fliers were killed here early tonight when an airplane in which they were riding went out of control and crashed two blocks from the business section. Richard North, jr., 17 years old, of Neosho, the pilot, burned to death in the wreckage.

George Staats, of Siloam Springs, Ark., who was on a wing, apparently attempting to repair an aileron, jumped just before the plane struck, and was killed.

Big Statue of Washington Is Unveiled at Rapid City

Face of Country's Founder Revealed as Reminder of Nation's Glory in Rushmore Memorial; Sculptor Borglum Speaks.

Rapid City, N. Dak., July 4 (A.P.).—Gutzon Borglum's gigantic face of George Washington, carved on Mount Rushmore's granite cliff, today was revealed as a reminder through the centuries of the historical foundation of the United States.

In simple impressive Independence Day ceremonies in the heart of South Dakota's Black Hills, an audience of 2,500 witnessed the unveiling of the 60-foot head of the first President of the United States, the first unit of Mount Rushmore National Memorial.

On the Nation's birthday, a patriotic note was sounded by the speakers in the mountain setting near the center of the North American continent.

"America's Shrine for Political Democracy," the monument was called by Joseph S. Cullinan, of Houston, Tex., chairman of the Federal commission in charge of Borglum's massive project.

Borglum said it was a monument to the aspirations of a great people, not to individual men. The sculptor told the audience that the monument "would include the heads of Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, along with a brief history of the Nation's founding and expansion to be written by former President Calvin Coolidge."

Washington's head appears high on the granite cliff at an elevation of 6,200 feet above sea level. Pine and spruce trees are dense at the foot and stretch for miles over the rugged blank hills.

Ceremonies were held at noon today on the veranda of Borglum's studio on Doane Mountain, almost under Rushmore Memorial. The crowd gathered on boulders and under trees in a rustic setting.

Doane Robinson, of Pierre, S. Dak., who first proposed the Black Hills Memorial, described it a success without the necessity of completion of the figures of three other Presidents.

"On this mountain top America today enshrines her sturdy sires," Robinson said.

CANNON DENOUNCED IN SENATE'S RECORD

8,000-Word Attack on Bishop Inserted in Minutes by Permission.

CAPT. FITZHUGH AUTHOR

The Senate fired a parting shot at Bishop James Cannon, jr., just before it adjourned by granting unanimous consent for insertion in the Congressional Record of an 8,000 word denunciation of the bishop's bucket shop operations, his subsequent explanations, and his protestations of repentance when confronted with the prospect of an ecclesiastical trial at the recent Dallas conference.

The statement was prepared by Capt. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, Tenn., who, together with Josephus Daniels, filed the charges against the bishop at the Methodist conference. It was inserted in the Record at the request of Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, after Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, had asked to have printed a resolution adopted by the conference which, he said, disproved any assertions that the Southern Methodist Church had not taken an uncompromising stand against all forms of gambling. An objection by a single senator—and there were approximately 70 on the floor—would have excluded the statement.

Repented to Escape Trial.

Mr. Fitzhugh accused the bishop of "improper and immoral conduct" of violation of both civil and ecclesiastical law, of having made false statements to justify his conduct to his fellow Methodists, of having repented only to escape a trial, and declared of the committee on episcopacy which first indicted the bishop and then pardoned him that "it saved him from a trial, but it put the church itself on trial."

"If I believed that Bishop Cannon was sincere in his plea for clemency," Mr. Fitzhugh said, "I would be the last person to utter a word of criticism, notwithstanding it came only after a trial had been ordered and an indictment found, and notwithstanding that he has been perhaps more censorious and intolerant of the conduct and beliefs of others than any prominent citizen in America."

But, Mr. Fitzhugh went on, "the time required for Bishop Cannon to realize that he should confess to some degree of impropriety and misconduct and to an unconscious violation of the law of a sovereign State as well as a violation of the moral code, the law of the church, and his consecration vows, furnishes some food for reflection, especially in view of the fact that he had persistently and repeatedly for almost a year denied that there was anything improper in his trancasctions after he had given careful consideration to the question, both of the propriety and morality of a bishop engaging in such transactions, and also especially in view further of the correspondence with the bucket shop at the time the transactions were going on."

Correspondence With Firm.

The correspondence here referred to was the bishop's communications with Kable & Co., after having been impounded for more than a year by District Attorney Tuttle in New York.

When the bishop first appeared before the episcopacy committee, Mr. Fitzhugh revealed, he attempted to defend his speculations and when asked if he was sorry, replied "I am sorry I lost my $2,500."

How the bishop's activity proved costly to a coreligionist is recalled by Mr. Fitzhugh's statement that among the evidence offered to the episcopacy committee was "an affidavit of a Methodist who had seen him in this bucket shop and who had lost money in it because he thought if the bishop was a patron that the concern must be all right."

"But we are told we should no longer complain, because the bishop has been sent to Africa," Mr. Fitzhugh said. "This is another regrettable consequence of the irregular and unauthorized action of the committee on episcopacy in passing his character in the face of untried charges of immoral conduct, which continues him in office, but with limitations, express or implied. He himself knew that he would not be acceptable to the conferences in America; therefore, he must be sent to the heathen, who of all persons in the world should have as a spiritual guide one above reproach."

THREE RACING BAGS SIGHTED ON COURSE

the "E. H. Brown" he had registered as his aide was his daughter, Mrs. E. H. Brown, of Evansville, Ind. She, too, was left among the groundlings.

The Hineman-Honeywell incident was an involved one, which began with the St. Louis veterans agreement, before reaching Houston, to turn over to Hineman one of his two balloons. Yesterday afternoon, however, it was discovered that the Hineman craft had a torn envelope and Honeywell promptly offered to give up his personal balloon to the other and withdraw.

To forestall this, the race committee phoned Brig. Gen. Frank Lahm of San Antonio, who agreed to allow the use of the spare balloon here on his understanding that it was to represent the City of Houston. The bag, however, was made available to Hineman, and Honeywell expected to use his own.

This afternoon Gen. Lahm, arriving at the race field as a spectator, noted that Hineman proposed to use the Army balloon as the standard bearer of a commercial enterprise and demurred, saying he had authorized the craft to be used only that Houston might have an entry.

Auto and Violence Deaths Show Drop

106 Suicides During Last 12 Months, Says Report of Police Official.

Deaths from violence and traffic accidents have decreased in the District during the fiscal year just ended, according to statistics compiled by Lieut. L. I. H. Edwards, in charge of the personnel work in the Police Department.

In the fiscal year ending June 30 deaths from violence totaled 346, a decrease of 9, compared with the previous corresponding period. Traffic deaths declined from 89 to 68 in the period.

There were 91 homicide victims during the two-year period, 50 in 1929 and 41 in 1930. Suicides in the last twelve months totaled 106, an increase of 6 compared with the previous period. In the two years there were 247 deaths from accidents other than traffic, 131 in the past twelve months and 116 during the previous fiscal year.

ETHICS CODE DRAWN FOR UNIVERSITY MEN

Professors Must Not Accept Pay From Private Firms for Research.

PRINCIPLES LAID DOWN

The college or university professor must not accept compensation from any private corporation for the pursuit of investigation if the subject of the research is related to actual or probable questions of controversial public policy, according to the report of the committee on ethics of the American Association of University Professors in the last issue of the association's bulletin.

Nor is it proper for an educational institution to receive aid from a corporation in carrying on research if controversial public policies are involved.

This report, prepared by Prof. E. R. A. Seligman, of Columbia University, at the request of the committee, is the result of the recent governmental inquiries into the propaganda activities carried on by public utility corporations, and particularly of the charges that individuals of the academic profession had become agents of the propaganda.

Principles for Future.

"The purpose of this report is not to tell the public utilities what to do or to send them any homilies," says the report. "We shall have quite enough to do to recall to our own members in the academic profession a sense of their obligations. Our object is to lay down a set of principles to be followed in the future."

According to the findings, "very few cases are noted of alleged impropriety on the part of regular instructors in the academic departments" of institutions "or of teachers of economics in the schools of business or elsewhere. In almost every case of alleged improper activity the individual in question was either a subordinate instructor or connected with the extension department or some technical day or night school."

Honesty Is Unimpeached.

The report holds further that the honesty of offending instructors can not be impeached. These instructors "were lacking in the tact that was necessary or perhaps in an appreciation of the gravity of the situation."

But, however innocent the professor may be, the report points out, it is vital both to industry and to education that not the slightest suspicion be incurred by anyone in the academic ranks.

"The university professor must be like the judge," added the report. "His reputation for impartiality must be equally unsullied."

Documents Reveal Declaration Origin

Historic Exhibit Opened on "Fourth" at Library of Congress.

Documents illustrating development of the Declaration of Independence were placed on exhibition yesterday at the Library of Congress in connection with the national observance of Independence Day. The exhibit of eleven documents will be on display for an indefinite period.

These papers, in a case adjacent to the shrine containing the original Declaration, show that instrument as having its origin in the first three propositions of the Virginia Bill of Rights, by George Mason; in Thomas Jefferson's preamble to the Virginia Constitution, and in Richard Henry Lee's motion in the Continental Congress, which, in turn, was based upon the instructions of the Virginia convention of 1776 to the Virginia delegates to the Continental Congress.

The eleven documents, with one exception, were taken from the collections of the library following the addition to them of papers owned by William E. Benjamin, of New York.

DISTRICT MEASURE FIGHT IS PROBABLE

Mere Fact of Closing Does Not Stop Chicago Boys From Full Dance.

SEEK CAPITAL GANG, TOO

The 1931 District appropriation bill is a law, but the bitter Senate and House fight it precipitated threatens to flare up again at the next session. Unless something unforeseen happens, the adjournment will be merely an interlude, a rest between rounds.

Three resolutions that might solve the problem were introduced, but none of them was acted on.

They were introduced by three men who are extremely anxious to bring an end to the annual battle over the question of how much the Federal Government should contribute toward the support of the District Government—Senator Wesley Jones (Republican), of Washington; Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut, and Representative R. Walton Moore (Republican), of Virginia.

The resolutions, though they provide for a different set-up, have the same purpose—the creation of a commission to study the fiscal relations question and to make a recommendation as to what the Federal contribution should be.

Likely to Cause Fight.

Even these resolutions are likely to bring about a fight, for, unless he has undergone a change of heart, Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), of Nebraska, is not ready to agree to any one of them.

The aftermath of the fight over the 1931 District bill, a fight from which the Senate emerged victoriously after forcing the House to agree to a Federal contribution of $9,500,000, was marked by plenty of evidence that another battle looms for the session beginning in December.

Representative Simmons put through a resolution providing for the creation of a committee of seven, whose duty it would be to make a study of the fiscal relations question and the taxation situation here in general.

Mr. Simmons' committee would consist entirely of House members, whereas the commission's suggestion in the other bills would include members of both houses, other Government officials and possibly prominent citizens.

The committee undoubtedly will favor a small Federal contribution, and also probably will recommend a more drastic taxation system for the city.

Mr. Simmons conceived the idea of such an investigation at the height of the battle over the District bill, at a time when he was fighting mad. It is his contention that if a tax is placed on many things that are not now taxed, there will be no excuse for a bigger Federal contribution.

Mr. Simmons, contrary to what many persons think, will again be chairman of the District appropriations subcommittee at the next session. He is not scheduled to be promoted to the agriculture subcommittee until the next congress.

And then there was the parting shot of Representative Louis C. Cramton (Republican), of Michigan, the man who first sponsored the $9,000,000 lump sum when the city's expenses were being borne on a 60-40 basis.

After the House had agreed Thursday evening to the $9,500,000 figure, Mr. Cramton warned that this action should not be regarded as a precedent. It did not mean that $9,500,000 is to be granted again next year, he said, nor even that $9,000,000 was to be granted.

near third base. Smith said that the seats were on the extreme corner of the grandstand near the bleachers. He tried to approach Glassman but the latter hastily departed, Smith told police. Glassman was charged with selling baseball tickets in a public place.

The six others were taken in custody between 12:30 o'clock and 1:30 o'clock at Seventh street and Florida avenue northwest by Eighth Precinct Detective W. R. Laflin and Policeman E. Barrett, both in plainclothes, who said they observed the men doing a flourishing business. They said the half-dozen were scalping grand-stand seats.

Two were taken together. They were Martin Kline, 22 years old, and Arthur Abrams, 32 years old, both of Philadelphia. The others, all arrested individually, were Oscar Metz, 40 years old, a painter, of Park road near Georgia avenue northwest; Benjamin Fletcher, 28 years old, a clerk of N street near Thirteenth street northwest; Joseph Prulitsky, 23 years old, a chauffeur, of Twenty-fourth street near L street northwest; and Martin Johnson, 21 years old, of H street near Ninth street northwest. All except Johnson was released on $500 bond.

Seventeen colored youths, a 6-year-old white boy and a 67-year-old Negro were nabbed by Eighth Precinct police early yesterday afternoon near Griffith Stadium on charges of soliciting parking from motorists attending the baseball games.

The activity followed a roundup of 18 other youngsters, mostly Negroes, in the same area on Wednesday afternoon. As was the case Wednesday, the 19 taken yesterday were booked at the precinct station and released on $5 collateral each. The youths under 17 years will face Juvenile Court today, while the others will be tried in Police Court.

The drive against the "watch-your-car" clan was launched by Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police, after complaints had been made that the solicitors frequently made reprisals by letting air from tires and damaging cars of motorists who declined to hire them.

Policeman Arresting Pair Is Badly Bitten

Private Joseph P. Comiskey, of the Fourth Precinct, was injured yesterday when, it is alleged, he was assaulted with a bottle and bitten by a colored couple he was placing under arrest. The two, Francis Boston, 30 years old, and his wife, Alberta, both of Desmonds court southwest, were charged at Fourth Precinct with assault.

The policeman was treated at Emergency Hospital for a fracture of a finger on his right hand, bruises of the head and bites on his left side. He said that the man hit him with a bottle, while the woman did the biting.

Home Town Goes Wild As Hunter Boys Land

Sparta, Ill., July 4 (A.P.).—Sparta's Fourth of July celebration tonight was a little louder than usual. But there was cause for the added noise, since Sparta was celebrating not only Independence Day, but also the landing of the Hunter boys in Chicago after they had established a new record for endurance flying.

When word that the Hunters had landed reached here the town "went wild," as one resident put it. Even while celebrating the success of new endurance champions, plans were being discussed for a real homecoming for the fliers. A mass meeting will be held Monday night when final arrangements will be made for the homecoming.

Many residents of this town of 3,000 were in Chicago today when the flight ended.

COOLIDGE BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED ON 4TH

COLUMN IS MENTIONED

Northampton, Mass., July 4 (A.P.).—Since the days when his mail came addressed to "His Honor, the Mayor of Northampton," until today, two years after his retirement as President, Calvin Coolidge has received a card of greeting from a woman in a little backwoods town in Vermont. For the past twenty years she always remembered that July 4 was Mr. oolidge's birthday.

When the former President went to his office today he found a bundle of greeting cards, which, he said, in their scope represented a cross-section of the American people. Former members of his Cabinet, Washington officials and many of the rank and file of the country remembered his fifty-eighth birthday. All pleased the former Chief Executive, but the one from the woman in Vermont, whose identity he declined to reveal, was of especial interest. Included in the number were several from children who called attention to the fact that they too were celebrating a birthday in addition to the birthday of the United States.

Many families here sent flowers picked from their gardens, old friends made personal visits and Mr. Coolidge's former chef on the presidential yacht Mayflower sent a large cake from New York.

The former President said his mail also contained several responses to newspaper articles he has been writing. Somes of these, he said, came from "high sources."

NOW, come fellows, altogether—let's give that boy Walter Newton a hand. He has had his traducers around here these many months. There have been critics who said that as a presidential counselor he was not doing so well.

I have not been able to keep a close enough check on him to know whether the criticism is merited or not. There is, however, no escaping this fact. Mr. Newton finished the session with Congress in a blaze of glory. His enemies won't like that but facts, like pigs, is facts.

IT was the last two weeks of the session that the gentleman struck his high batting stride. His standing was just about 1.000 instead of the good average of 300 per cent.

Take, for example, when the stolid House lost its stolidness and surrendered to its suppressed desires and passed a veterans' bill that was generally tamped as a disgraceful legislative act.

The mood of the House was ugly. It looked angrily at its friends and critics alike with an attitude of "Well, what of it? We not only passed the bill, but we intend to pass it over the President's veto."

* * * *

THE credit for straightening out this debacle has been generally given to Speaker Longworth. But Mr. Newton had his hands in what work was done. He just sort of circulated among his former colleagues with something like this: "The chief is blistering mad. I can't calm him down. He intends to fight you fellows in your campaign for reelection. I don't suppose I have ever seen him so hot."

The Republican gentlemen of the House gave ear. They gave heart and finally they decided they did not want to be disorderly after all.

* * * *

THEN when they substituted their denounced legislation with a pension bill the Senate boosted the pension rates which created another situation. What would the veterans do to them if they refused to agree to the higher Senate rates? They do not know yet. But they do know this.

Mr. Newton came again amongst them with a little story something like this: "Gosh, I am afraid the President is going to veto the rivers and harbors bill. At least, he isn't going to sign it until he finds out what the pension rates are to be." This little story even crept into the newspapers.

It so happens that there is more or at least as much pork in the rivers and harbors bill as there is in the pension bill.

The members of the House are naive fellows. Back home within the confines of their district they are very pompous and self-assured. They are lost in the maze that is the Nation's Capital.

It was not for them to reason that about the last thing the President would veto was the rivers and harbors bill, inasmuch as it carries waterway development so closely associated with his administration. But the story did the work. They stayed in line on the pension bill.

Mr. Newton is good; sometimes, in fact, worth his weight in gold.

OFFICERS OF THREE COMMITTEES HELD IN MUTINY OVER HUSTON

raises a situation that must be dealt with in some manner, however.

Other G. O. P. Problems.

One suggestion heard is that Commissioner of Internal Revenue Lucas might be made sort of a Republican Jouett Shouse. To all intents and purposes, Mr. Shouse is the chairman of the Democratic national committee, yet he is not really that. He is batting for Mr. Raskob while the latter, holding on to the title, effaces himself.

The Republicans have more than Mr. Huston as a problem, however, and they have got to get together pretty soon to get many tangles straightened out.

Senator George H. Moses, chairman of the senatorial campaign committee, has a business man treasurer on his hands in the person of Theodore Gary, of Kansas City, the man who makes the automatic telephones. Mr. Gary has said apropos the forthcoming senatorial campaign that inasmuch as he is the man who must make the affidavits on campaign expenditures he is the one who will do the expending.

Senator Moses denies that there is any conflict between him and Mr. Gary, but Mr. Gary is known to have taken the stand attributed to him and that being the case there must be a conflict.

Business men are seldom blessed with the faculty of making little political finesses. A fine pickle the Republicans would be in if in the next campaign they gave an itemized account of every penny they spent. It is not a question of illegal expenditures; it is a question of giving the enemy as few secrets as possible.

Explosion Looked For.

A politically minded treasurer, for example, would give Senator Moses lump sums and without question on his call, and no one knows better than the senator how these lump sums should be disposed of.

And although the senator is maintaining a very negative reserve about this matter, there is every reason to believe that a blow-up is imminent. Treasurers of political committees are not supposed to take their jobs too seriously.

Mr. Gary was given the honor after Senator Moses had first selected Otto H. Kahn. A ruckus was stirred up, and Mr. Kahn very promptly declined to serve. How Mr. Gary was eased into the picture has not been developed.

The fact that he has taken his job seriously is militating against the selection of a "business man" to succeed Mr. Huston. Walter Head, a Nebraska business man, was talked of for some time, but Mr. Gary's attitude just proves that business men do not understand.

committee a week or so ago and Chairman Borah has promised to hold it before the Senate until action has been had.

Comprehensive hearings were held before both the foreign relations and the naval committees where Secretaries Stimson and Adams defended the treaty and various naval officers testified that it did not grant the United States enough 10-inch-gun cruisers for its needs.

There have been no definite predictions of the time that will be necessary for the Senate to dispose of the treaty. The senators, however, are weary from the long months of debate on the tariff and veterans' relief, and hope has been expressed that the session might end within ten days or two weeks.

Call to Senators.

In his call for the special session, the President said:

"Whereas public interests require that the Senate of the United States be convened at 12 o'clock on the 7th day of July next to receive such communications as may be made by the executive and in particular to consider and determine whether the advice and consent of the Senate shall be given to the ratification of a treaty for the limitation and reduction of naval armament, signed at London on April 22, 1930, by the plenipotentiaries of the President of the United States of America, the President of the French Republic, his majesty the King of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British dominions beyond the seas, Emperor of India, his majesty the King of Italy, and his majesty the Emperor of Japan, transmitted to the Senate on May 1, 1930;

"Now, therefore, I, Herbert Hoover, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Senate of the United States to convene at the Capitol, in the City of Washington, on the 7th day of July next, at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as members of that body are hereby required to take notice.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the Great Seal of the United States.

"Done at the City of Washington, this 3rd day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and fifty fourth.

"HERBERT HOOVER

"By the President:
"Wilbur J. Carr,
"Acting Secretary of State."

President Hoover and a small party left the White House yesterday for a week-end at his fishing camp in Virginia.

For the first time in months the President awakened to find Congress out of session and members of his "medicine ball cabinet," who play with him on the south lawn of the White House before breakfast each day, gone from the city.

So, unnoticed by the few persons on the streets, the Chief Executive took an early walk through the business section, accompanied only by two secret service men.

Leaving the White House about 6:30 o'clock, he was out for more than an hour. His route took him through the theater and retail shopping districts, along Pennsylvania avenue and past the huge Department of Commerce Building being built just below the Avenue. This was designed as one of the largest buildings in the world while Mr. Hoover was Secretary of Commerce.

Hoover Ponders Message.

Orange, Va., July 4 (A.P.).—To the same verdant woods where less than a year ago he sat down with Ramsay MacDonald to survey problems of international peace, President Hoover went today to ponder the message that is to urge Congress to ratify the treaty which sprang from that survey.

Except that the leaves are untouched by autumnal chill the scene amid which the President gave thought to his coming struggle with Congress was the same as that which lay before him and the British prime minister as they paced back and forth beside the Rapidan last October.

Much water has gone down the Rapidan since that time and their project has moved forward to the last stages. Each, however, has described it as the first step toward lessening the burdens of armaments and easing frictions among the nations of the world.

The President went to his Virginia retreat today without the large group of guests which usually accompanies him. In the automobile with him were his secretary, Walter Newton; Mrs. Newton and their son, John Marshall. Behind came Lawrence Richey, another secretary.

Guests at Lodge.

Several guests were already at the lodge, but for the most part they were friends of an intimacy dating back to the days when he lived on S street instead on Pennsylvania avenue. Some of them had gone ahead to visit with Mrs. Hoover, who has been there for several weeks recuperating from an injured back.

The President's journey to the camp was slowed by the holiday-clogged roads and various minor delays. At a narrow bridge across the Rappahannock, his party was forced to wait for a herd of cows which had started over the stream ahead of him. A broken spring forced Richey's car to drop out of the party and he joined it later at the camp.

There was no fishing, the Virginia season having closed on June 30, and the presidential party devoted much of the time to riding, walks through the hills and horse shoe pitching. They will remain over the week-end.

Brookhart's Bill Signed by Hoover

$3,000,000 in Belated Pay to Be Given to U. S. Employe Group

The signing of the Brookhart bill by President Hoover late Thursday night means that nearly $3,000,000 in belated pay raises will be distributed among some 45,000 employes of the Federal and District Governments, about 15,000 of whom are in Washington.

The bill, sponsored by Senator Brookhart (Republican), of Iowa, was designed to give employes raises that Congress thought it was giving them in the Welch act of 1928.

The bill does not take care of all employes, however, and there already is talk of additional legislation to provide for those slighted.

RIVER-HARBOR BILL SIGNED BY HOOVER

HUGE CHANNEL PROJECT

(Associated Press)

President Hoover signed a rivers and harbors bill yesterday which in his own words authorizes a larger project than the Panama Canal.

In a statement issued after he had attached his signature the Chief Executive enumerated three prospective benefits which may come from the measure.

Among its major projects, the act provides for the Government to take over the Erie and Oswego Canals and the Illinois water, and for a 9-foot channel in the upper Mississippi between the mouth of the Illinois and St. Paul and Minneapolis, a 6-foot channel in the upper Missouri from Kansas City to Sioux City, a 9-foot channel on the Tennessee from its mouth to Knoxville.

Others include channel deepening along the Great Lakes, work along the St. Lawrence waterway, and a Lake Okeechobee flood control project, in addition to numerous smaller harbor and waterway developement activities.

Text of Hoover's Statement.

The text of President Hoover's statement follows:

"It was with particular satisfaction that I signed the rivers and harbors bill as it represents the final authorization of the engineering work by which we construct and coordinate our great system of waterways and harbors, which I have advocated for over five years; it was promised in the last campaign and in my recommendations to Congress.

"We can now build the many remaining segments of a definite canalization of our river systems through which modern barge trains of 10,000 to 15,000 tons of burden can operate systematically through the Midwest and to the Gulf of Mexico, and through the lakes to the Atlantic. The system, when completed, will have 12,000 miles of waterways and will give waterway connection between such great cities as New Orleans, Memphis, Knoxville, Chattanooga, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Sioux City, Keokuk, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, Evansville, Cincinnati, Wheeling and Pittsburg. Through the Great Lakes and the Erie Canal many of these points will have access to central New York and the Atlantic. By its authorization for deepening of lake channels we shall support the present commerce of the Great Lakes and make preparation for ocean shipping by the ultimate deepening of the St. Lawrence. It authorizes numerous improvements in our harbors.

"It is a long view plan for the future. It will require many years to complete its construction. I do not propose that we should proceed in a haphazard manner, but that we should approach the problem on sound engineering lines, completing the main trunk systems and gradually extending the work outward along the lateral rivers.

"Some of the items authorized have not yet been recommended by the engineers, and of course they will not be undertaken unless they are so recommended.

No Increase in Budget.

"The bill does not call for any increase in the budget for this fiscal year, the appropriations having been provided by which work will be pushed at all available points in assistance to the temporary unemployment situation.

"I have, in cooperation with Secretary Hurley, established during the last year, a new organization for the conduct of these works. In this organization we have created under Gen. Lytle Brown eight separate divisions, headed by responsible directing engineers, as follows: Great Lakes Division, Col. E. M. Markham; Upper Mississippi Valley, Lieut. Col. G. S. Spalding; Lower Mississippi Valley, Brig. Gen. T. H. Jackson; North Atlantic Division, Col. W. J. Borden; South Atlantic Division, Col. H. B. Ferguson; Gulf Division, Lieut. Col. Mark Brook; North Pacific Division, CoCl. G. Sukesli; South Pacific Division, Lieut. Col. T. M. Robins.

"In aggregate this inland waterway undertaking represents a larger project than even the Panama Canal. It will provide employment for thousands of men. It should be fruitful of decreased transportation charges on bulk goods, should bring great benefits to our farms and to our industries. It should result in a better distribution of population away from the congested centers."

Morse Type of Airplane Demolished in Tumble

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., July 4 (A.P.).—A Thomas Morse scout plane, one of the last of its type in the country, was demolished today when it pancaked from 80 feet after its motor quit. Joseph Vanderchek, owner and pilot was uninjured.

Mr. Vanderchek recently bought the wartime single-seater in Texas, had it patched up and shipped here. Today was the first time he had taken it up.

Dynamite Goes Off; Two Laborers Killed

Winfield, W. Va., July 4 (A.P.).—Two workmen were killed and six others injured near here today by a premature explosion of dynamite and powder used on a road construction project.

chase but was quickly outdistanced. The baby was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Late in the afternoon, Saul G. Arnoff, 11 years old, of Baltimore, while walking at First and G streets northwest was painfully burned about the right leg in the explosion of a giant firecracker thrown at him by two men from a parked automobile, bearing a Virginia tag. The boy's father, Arnoff, started to remonstrate with the pair. One of the men flashed a pistol and told Arnoff to "beat it."

While the youth was being treated at Sibley Hospital, Arnoff reported the incident to Sixth Precinct police. Policemen L. Bailles and W. P. Burroughs shortly afterward spotted the coupe parked in front of an apartment at Third and G streets northwest. Two men who left the apartment a few moments later and started to get in the car were arrested.

The pair, both held for investigation at the precinct station, gave their names as Elmer Altizer, 34 years old, of Richlands, Va., and Frank Jewett, 23 years old, of the Astoria apartments, Third and G streets northwest. Police said they found a quantity of firecrackers in the machine. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson last night viewed the two men, but failed to make positive identification. Police intend to have Arnoff face the pair today.

Boy's Hand Injured.

Kenneth Swann, 9 years old, of 643 East Capitol street, was treated for burns, at Casualty Hospital, received when a firecracker exploded in his hand.

Premature explosion of a salute inflicted burns on the left shoulder of Eugene Laurie, 9 years old, of 1625 Rosedale street northeast. He was also treated at Casualty Hospital.

Injured when a firecracker he was holding in his mouth exploded, a child named Kelly, first name unknown, was treated at Emergency Hospital. The child, 4 years old, was brought in by friends of his parents, who said he lived in Bon Air, Va. The little boy was burned around the mouth and his lips were lacerated, but his condition is not serious, and he was taken home.

Samuel Mosley, colored, 12 years old, of 1452 T street northwest was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for burns on the hand caused by a cap pistol. After treatment he went home.

Ralph Clinton, of 1120½ Florida avenue northwest, was burned about the face and left hand last night at Seventeenth and B streets northeast by a firecracker. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Two Silver Spring youths were injured yesterday by firecrackers with which they were celebrating the Fourth of July.

W. R. Van Horn, 5809 Sligo Mill road, was burned on the left hand with a firecracker which exploded prematurely. He was treated at Walter Reed Hospital and returned to his home.

Firecracker Explodes Early.

John Oden, jr., 13 years old, of Silver Spring, was badly burned under the chin when a firecracker he was holding exploded in his hand. His chin and chest were burned. He was treated by his family physician.

Belated explosion of a firecracker he had picked up to examine burned Alfred Joel, colored, 14 years old, on the right hand early last night in front of his home at 1809 Benning road northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Wilson Jones, 14 years old, of 206 Fourteenth street northeast, suffered lacerations of the right hand and neck last night in front of his home when a firecracker exploded in his hand. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Claude Woods, colored, 27 years old, of 1250 Boulevard road northeast, suffered burns about the right eye last night at his home when a lighted sparkler was stuck in his face in play by a woman friend. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Treatment also was given at the hospital last night to Victor Laceny, 13 years old, of 3047 Douglas street northeast, for burns about the right hand received in the premature explosion of a firecracker at Fair Haven, Md.

Jeanette Davis, of R. F. D. No. 1, Alexandria, Va., was treated at the Alexandria Hospital for an injury to her eye caused by the premature explosion of a firecracker.

Woods Scoured for Boy, Who Fled Home in Ontario

Brother and Sister, Whom he Took Along, Found Safe But Runaway Still Eludes Countryside Searchers, Hindered by Tall Grass.

Kapuskasing, Ontario, July 4 (A.P.).—Victor Gareau, 6, who ran away from home Monday with his baby brother and sister, today still eluded searchers who have been beating the bush country around his farm home for four days.

The little girl and the other little boy were found Wednesday after they had hidden from searchers for two days, the distracted voice of their father calling, bringing them out of hiding.

Traces of Victor have been found from time to time but no one has seen him. He apparently is following the procedure all three adopted successfully, of dropping to the ground under a bush or in tall grass whenever searchers approach.

It is not known how the boy has lived, if he has survived, as he took no food with him when he left and the berries and roots he might find in the woods would hardly be sufficient to maintain life for long. His parents, however, hold firm to the belief that he still is alive.

All the countryside has joined in the search. Airplanes were used for a time until it was found that they were of little aid, due to the wooded character of the land which hides objects on the ground from searchers in the air.

A fund has been opened by local citizens to prosecute the search, which is continuing day and night, and to care for the Gareau family, which was found to be in extreme need of financial aid.

RAIL HOLDING DATA BRANDED STARTLING

Initial Inquiry Declared by Rayburn to Hint at Perilous Control.

SPECIAL REPORT FILED

(Associated Press.)

The initial investigation into railroad ownership by the House interstate commerce committee was described yesterday by Representative Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, as having "disclosed startling facts as to the far-reaching control of some of the Nation's major railroad systems by uncontrolled holding and investment trust companies."

Rayburn, ranking minority member of the committee, made public a special report submitted to him by Dr. W. M. W. Splawn, chief investigator, on investment trust companies, Chairman Parker, of the committee, this week made public an interim report on the holding company phase of the inquiry.

Extent of Holdings.

The report of Rayburn showed that of 110 investment trust companies, having a capital and surplus in excess of $5,000,000 each, 50 held railroad voting securities, while it has not been determined whether 28 others held such securities.

Although the report did not divulge names of the investment companies, it said 1 held voting securities in 50 railroad lines, while 23 were said to hold securities of the Alleghany Corporation, the holding company dominated by the Van Sweringen interests, of Cleveland.

In addition, the report said, eight investment trust companies held voting securities in the Chesapeake Holding Co; six in the Pennroad Holding Co., dominated by the Pennsylvania Railroad, and three in the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Holding Co.

It said investment trust companies held on January 1, 1930, 36 per cent of the New York Central securities; 34 per cent of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe; 33 per cent of the Union Pacific; 29 per cent of the Pennsylvania; 20 per cent of the Baltimore & Ohio; 18 per cent in the Chesapeake & Ohio; Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; Southern, and Southern Pacific, and 15 per cent in the Canadian Pacific, the Missouri Pacific and the New York New Haven & Hartford.

Guide For New Laws.

"If the disclosures in the remainder of the inquiry are comparable to the development in the preliminary stage," Rayburn said, "I fear that some of these tremendously strong financial organizations have a greater influence in the field of transportation than any one organization should have."

The investigation was instituted to determine what legislation is necessary to bring holding and investment companies under Government jurisdiction in order that the policy of merging the Nation's 1,500 lines into 21 great competitive systems may be carried out.

CAPITAL CELEBRATES FOURTH WITH RITES

who had been scheduled for the reading, was called out of the city.

Probably the most colorful features of the program were the torchlight procession of color guards and uniformed bodies and the massing of colors by the patriotic and veterans organizations. Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, who acted as marshal of the latter parade, led the spectators in repeating the oath of allegiance to the flag.

Throngs Rush to Seats.

Following the pronouncement of the benediction by the Rev. Francis J. Hurney and the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," the special guests in the reserved seat section were turned loose to find the bleachers on the opposite side of the Monument from which they were to watch the fireworks.

To the dismay of a large proportion of them, however, they found the seats for which they held tickets were already filled with persons who bought tickets while the service was in progress.

There was much confusion and much grumbling on the part of scores who were forced to fight their way in an already packed throng. Many went directly home without awaiting the pyrotechnic display.

Among the novelty fireworks was a "U. S. N." dirigible that had a fire-shooting propeller. Lighted sketches of President Hoover, George Washington and the Statue of Liberty, also drew favorable "ahs."

Policeman is Injured.

Policeman T. A. Schultz, of the First Precinct, though off duty, was severely burned when struck by a parachute flare dropped from an airplane early in the outburst. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

At least one boy was temporarily lost. He was Clay C. Tarmon, 12 years old, of Falls Church, Va., who wandered away from his brother.

The airplane demonstration, which was scheduled to precede the fireworks, failed to materialize, though a single-lighted plane from Bolling Field circled the grounds a few times. The huge searchlights of the 260th Coast Guard Artillery, District National Guard, which were slated to pick out the aircraft in a mimic battle, spent their rays on toy balloons. Their guns boomed, however, while the atmosphere around them quivered.

Community observance drew hundreds of frolickers, a large proportion of them children. Room on golf courses, tennis courts and in swimming pools was at a premium. And the Griffith Stadium was literally packed to the gates.

Even some policemen smiled reminiscently and turned their backs as children gleefully set off fireworks in sedate residential sections throughout the day. While the fun was in progress in the suburbs, the business district was oddly quiet, with practically all industry at a standstill.

Scouts Assist Police.

Special details of Metropolitan and United States Park Police handled the long lines of congested traffic, while Girl and Boy Scouts acted as aids to various officials.

All-day celebrations, including athletic events, costume parades, and fireworks, were held at the Burroughs Recreation Park and in the Petworth, Takoma Park and Wesley Heights communities. The Association of Oldest Inhabitants and the Society of Natives held a patriotic service at the Epiphany Church Parish Hall.

Observances characterized chiefly by sporting events were held at the various camps operated by organizations affiliated with the Community Chest. Nearby resorts on the Chesapeake Bay were filled with merry-makers who also staged miniature celebrations.

C.M.T.C. RECRUITS OBSERVE HOLIDAY

Fort Eustis Is Opened With 2,000 Embryo Officers Taking Oath.

'WAR' TRAINING PLANNED

The spirit of Old Glory was instilled in the hearts of several thousand young men yesterday who are receiving their first taste of army life in citizens' military training camps in the Third Corps area, comprising recruits from the District of Columbia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Virginia.

Ceremonies, appropriate to the day, were conducted at Fort Myer, Fort Washington, Fort Hoyle and the other encampments. Last night the boys at Fort Myer obtained a clear view of the firework display in the Monument Grounds, having box seats in the Virginia hills.

The C. M. T. C. Camp at Fort Eustis, Va., offically opened yesterday with 2,000 candidates taking the oath of allegiance to their country at a ceremony in the camp grove. An address of welcome was delivered by Col. Alfred T. Smith, commanding the Thirty-fourth Infantry, who will be the post commander during the C. M. T. C. period. The oath of allegiance was administered by Capt. Charles R. Jones, of the Thirty-fourth Infantry, the adjutant for the citizen soldiers during the month of training.

Representative Bland Speaks.

Addresses were also made to the young soldiers by Representative S. O. Bland, of Virginia, and Prof. George E. Brooks, of the College of William and Mary at Williamsburg. The invocation was offered by Chaplain Ivan L. Bennett, in charge of religious activities at Fort Eustis. Music was played by the Thirty-fourth Infantry Band.

Beginning today, battlefield exercises will commence at Fort George G. Meade, in which regular Army, National Guard and organized reserves will participate. These exercises will be the first of their kind to be held in the Third Corps Area since the World War. Parts in the exercises will be taken by 181 regular officers, 212 National Guard and 273 organized reserve officers. A feature of the exercises will be an attempted repulsion of an invasion of the Third Corps Area.

Defensive 'War' Planned.

The first week of the exercises will be consumed in preparing for a defense against the attack. The general situation will embrace two nations, one belligerent and the other nonbelligerent. The warlike nation, known as the reds, will be composed of a cavalry division and four infantry, divisions and they will land on a front consisting of Annapolis and Herring Bay. The blues, the defensive nation, will consist of regulars, national guards and reserves of the third corps area. The war will continue until July 19 when the camp will close.

More than 300 cadets from West Point and several hundred from Annapolis who have been taking courses in tank study and aviation at Fort George G. Meade will leave today.

Philadelphia's war regiment, the 304th combat engineers, will be mobilized tomorrow under orders of the War Department for a period of training at Camp Humphreys, Va. The regiment will be in command of Col. Charles D. Young.

LumbermanFound Dead In Burned Automobile

Kinston, N. C., July 4 (A.P.).—The body of a man believed to be J. C. Causey, Suffolk, Va., lumberman was found in a burned automobile 9 miles from here today. Police expressed belief he had been murdered and robbed.

Causey, reputedly wealthy, was seen in this vicinity yesterday, and it is understood that he was about to begin logging operations in Lenoir County woods.

Young River Wanderers Found at Grandfather's

Augusta, Ga., July 4 (A.P.).—Cleveland Smith, 13 years old, and Julian Taylor, 15, of Clearwater, S. C., who disappeared on the Savannah River a week ago after leaving word for relatives that they were going to float down to Savannah, Ga., in a small boat, have been found at Appleton, S. C.

They are at the home of young Smith's grandfather and are none the worse for their adventure.

NATION'S EDUCATORS HEAR FINLEY SPEECH

IS "LAW OF UNIVERSE"

Columbus, Ohio, July 4 (A.P.).—While members of the National Education Association celebrated the anniversary of American Independence Day today, John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, called upon them to recognize that destiny is fast increasing interdependence among nations.

Mr. Finley spoke at the closing session of the association's sixty-eighth annual convention. The new president, Dr. Willis A. Sutton, of Atlanta, Ga., was installed at this session and Los Angeles was selected as the 1931 meeting place.

So vast are our boundaries becoming, in the sense of interdependence, that the Angel Gabriel on Judgment today might well be able to discard his trumpet for the radio, which at that time will reach every human being at the self-same moment, Boston to Bombay and back again, the speaker said.

"On this day of Independence," he said, "I would repeat in peace the word which was on our lips in war—interdependence—to make and keep the whole world, and not patches of it here and there, a fit place to which we may conscientiously invite children to come and go to school.

"Self-determination is a brave word if it thought only of self. Interword if it thoight only of self. Interdependence is the law of the universe from the atoms to the stars. Our supreme national achievement has been the demonstration of the practicability of federation on a large scale," he said. He quoted John Fisk as prophesying 50 years ago that it would become desirable at the end of a century for the States of Europe to enter into a federal union.

"We are only a half century on the way from the time when that prophecy was made, but Europe is already astir with that vision," Mr. Finley said.

In agriculture, in mineralogy, in aestheticism and in culture the law of interdependence is demonstrating itself, he said.

The children of America, he predicted, will be the leaders of an interdependent civilization.

FLAMING BODY FOUND ON NEW YORK STREET

police first to accept the theory that he was a hanger-on of the Bronx building racket who had, somehow, contrived to be put on the spot. Then, later, they dismissed this idea and supplanted it with another.

The second was that Brinkman, who probably had for associates a number of gangsters, had got into a fight with some of them. He had, the detectives theorized, been dealt a paralyzing blow with a bottle or something, and then, just to play safe and get him out of the way, police decided that those with whom Brinkman had been fighting calmly shot him several times and then burned his body to destroy any evidence of a fight.

Detroit, Mich., July 4 (A.P.).—Police believed tonight that three women held the key to the gangland execution of two Chicago hoodlums and the wounding of another man last night near the heart of Detroit's downtown district.

One is Mrs. Julia Kuffel Connors, widow of a Chicago racketeer who was killed nine months ago, and more recently a sweetheart of William Cannon, one of the assassin's victims last night.

Another is known as Lou McDonald, said by police to be the common law wife of George Collins, the other hoodlum, who died from a gangster bullet in last night's killings.

The other woman is Mrs. Mabel Barrett, sister of Cannon. She lives at the La Salle Hotel, by the side of which the three men were shot down, and had talked to Cannon by telephone earlier in the day. At first police suspected she had "put then on the spot." This theory was dropped when it was learned she had merely discussed with her brother the condition of their mother, ill in Receiving Hospital. Police are convinced, however, she can shed light on her brother's activities which will help solve the crime.

The McDonald woman was arrested early this morning when she visited the county morgue and identified Collins' body as that of a man who had visited her several times within the last two years.

The police believed that the slayings were the outgrowth of liquor traffic between Detroit and Illinois cities.

The two slain gangsters were William Cannon and George Collins. Their companion, Michael Stitzel, was seriously wounded.

A revolver was found by detectives in a clothes hamper in the hotel basement. While not believed to have been the one used in the shooting, it was turned over to firearms experts for examination.

Collins has a Detroit police record, having been picked up for investigation in connection with numerous holdups and kidnapings several years ago.

Both Collins and Cannon were known to Detroit and Chicago authorities as liquor runners. Stitzel who claims he knew nothing of their activities, was a doorman at "Lefty" Clark's gambling house when it flourished in downtown Detroit some time ago.

terical throng. It was only by luck that the first "flash," telling of the landing was clicked over the special telegraph wires before the uncontrolable spectators managed to shove their way into the hangar and tear away the wires. They were speedily repaired and the harried writers were able to get their stories of the landing and the subsequent bedlam to the hundreds of waiting newspapers.

Kenneth Much Disappointed.

Ten minutes after the landing, police managed to clear a path and drag the two fliers into an office, where they posed for pictures and had their first chance to relax.

Kenneth, oil-spattered, unshaven, but smiling, said it was a keen disappointment to have been forced down, but added that it would have been too risky to attempt staying up any longer. "We had hoped to keep going at least until tomorrow," he said. "But when the oil screen clogged and the gauge quit, we thought the only thing to do was come down. The oil was spurting back on us pretty bad."

"We sure are tickled to death with our new record, but what we want most right now is a bath and rest."

Neither of the fliers had any definite idea concerning their future. "Just give me a bath," exclaimed Kenneth. "You don't know how much you miss one until you do without for three or four weeks."

He revealed neither he nor John had bathed during the whole time of their flight, although he said they had shaved occasionally.

Cheered by Crowd.

After a brief rest, the two pilots and their brothers, Walter and Albert Hunter, who manned the refueling plane, were escorted to the top of the hangar and introduced to the crowd amid cheers. It was announced they would be taken to a Chicago Loop hotel, for an overnight rest and the crowd was invited to join in an automobile parade to the Loop.

The holiday crowd lost no time in falling in line for the triumph and procession to town.

Kenneth had to borrow a pair of trousers before he could remove his grimy overalls. He explained he had torn the leg from his own pants, to use as a rag.

John, wreathed in smiles, praised the monoplane which carried him and his brother to the new world's record. "The little old motor sure did more than we expected and except for the oil trouble was just as sound when we came down as when we went up."

The brothers complained about losing much sleep in the last few days, blaming the numerous other planes which kept circling near them as they soared around the airport. "We had to keep our eyes open most of the time."

Two Meals Each Day.

The boys said they limited themselves to only two meals a day, in the morning and evening, and said they didn't begin to get used to their aerial meals until they had been up about a week.

They divided the task of piloting the ship, each taking the controls for intervals of from three to five hours, while the other caught a few moments' nap, looked over the plane and performed other necessary duties.

Neither of the boys could give a clear description of their feelings after more than three weeks in the air. "We didn't have a chance to think about how we felt," John said. "The radio was our only recreation."

"There was always plenty to do, with changing oil, cleaning valves, working on the engine and keeping our cabin as clean as possible. We weren't really groggy until today and that was because we lost so much sleep the last few days with all those other planes flying around us.

"You can't blame our landing on anything. That motor is running just as smooth right now as the day we went up. We never even changed a spark plug in it. Just a few little repairs to the oil line will give us a real motor again.

Boys Half Asleep.

"Tomorrow at noon," John added, "I'll be out walking, but I have no other plans, until I get a good night's sleep and see how it feels to have my feet on the ground again."

Both boys seemed sleepy as they talked with newspaper men. They really were sleepy. Questions had to be put to them three and four times before they were fully understood, their drowsiness and partial deafness making it difficult for them to hear.

John said he lost no time in coming down after the trouble developed because he feared he might crack up with the motor spraying oil all over them and the cabin. "I had hoped to drop a note just before we landed, but when the time came to come down, I didn't think it advisable to take any chances."

In the next flight, John said he will have a dual oil screen so that one could be disconnected and cleaned while the other was functioning. And the next flight, he said, will be made just as soon as other flyers equal or beat the record made by him and Kenneth.

Plan Nonstop Trip.

Both John and Kenneth said they hoped to make a nonstop refueling flight around the borders of the United States as quickly as it can be arranged.

John qualified his statements about the future, to make it clear that the record flying may be done by any of the four Hunter brothers. He intimated that in their next trip he and Kenneth might man the refueling plane while Walter and Albert serve as the endurance crew.

The City of Chicago, grimy with oil was nestled in the hangar under a heavy guard against souvenir hunters, while the Hunter boys decided what they would do next and when they would do it.

The record-breaking plane is a second-hand Stinson-Detroiter, powered by a Wright whirlwind motor of 300 horsepower. It is two years old and was built and sold to the C. A. K. Air Lines in 1928 for commercial aviation. After considerable service on that line, it was sold to the "Chicago—We Will" Corporation and used by them in two endurance flights here last fall, each of ten days duration. It had flown approximately 70,000 miles before it went up on its latest flight.

SOUTHERN CROSS COMPLETES WORLD JOURNEY

WORLD HOP FINISHED BY SOUTHERN CROSS

Ship Lands at Oakland After Girdling Earth Within Two-Year Period.

LEADER DETAILS PLANS

Oakland, Calif., July 4 (A.P.).—Wing Commander Charles Kinsford-Smith, with no more worlds to conquer, landed his globe-girdling trimotored monoplane, Southern Cross, at Oakland Airport at 2:36 p. m. (Pacific standard time) today. The plane left Salt Lake City at 9 a. m. (Middle standard time).

Commander Kingsford-Smith was the only member of the crew that left Oakland May 31, 1928, for Australia, the start on a world-circling flight which carried the blue-winged plane into both the North and South hemispheres, and across the South Seas.

Thousands cheered as the great plane dropped swiftly to the field, bearing the flight commander, Radio Operator John Stannage, J. Patrick Saul, navigator, and Evert Van Dyk, copilot.

The party crossed the North Atlantic two weeks ago from Ireland to Newfoundland, where they were forced down for lack of fuel. They refueled and made a triumphal entry into New York June 26.

Project Not Intended.

Although the Southern Cross and Commander Kingsford-Smith completed the aerial circumnavigation of the globe, the commander said he never intended such a project when he and his crew left Oakland and started across the Pacific.

They stopped at Honolulu after a transpacific flight of 2,400 miles; again at Suva 3,197 miles farther across the Pacific, and from there hopped to Australia, completing their 8,700-mile journey June 9. With the commander on this trip were two Americans, James Warner and Harry Lyon, and his copilot, Charles P. T. Ulm.

In April, 1929, Kingsford-Smith with another crew started for London and after being forced down in the Australian bush and for two weeks feared dead, were rescued and continued the trip in a number of jumps.

The flights from London to New York and back to Oakland completed the tour.

Escorted by Pursuit Planes.

The Southern Cross was escorted from Mount Diablo, 25 miles east of Oakland, by pursuit planes.

The fliers were welcomed by Mayor John L. Davie of Oakland and other officials, who escorted them to Oakland, where a reception was held.

Kingsford-Smith set at rest speculation concerning disposition of the famed Southern Cross Fokker plane which has been his flying partner three years.

The commander said he would take the ship to Santa Maria next week and present it to Capt. Allen Hancock, backer of the first flight from Oakland to Australia.

"I am in very much of a hurry to get back to Australia, where I have a wedding engagement in late September," the flier said. "When we dispose of the ship I expect to fly back to New York, take a ship to England and go direct to Australia."

He did not add whether he intended to make the trip from England by plane. The commander said his world flights are over. He will wed Miss Mary Powell in Sydney next September.

The City of Oakland tonight presented him a silver service in aeronautical design as a wedding present. Framed scrolls commemorating their achievement were presented all the fliers.

VICTIM NOT FOUND IN 'DOUBLE KILLING'

Phone Call Reports Murder and Suicide in Fashionable Apartment.

"JOKER" IS SUSPECTED

Mystery surrounds an alleged murder and suicide supposed to have occurred at Tilden Gardens, 3041 Sedgwick street northwest, and reported to police by telephone last night by a man whose voice they aver "showed evidence of great excitement."

Whether the mysterious caller may have been a murderer who notified police before taking his own life in a locked apartment, or whether the message was the idea of humor possessed by some "drunk" or moronic jokester, is a problem which the police have not yet been able to solve.

Before he could be questioned, the man hung up his telephone without giving the number of the apartment in which the double tragedy was supposed to have occurred. Police of the Fourteenth Precinct and members of the Headquarters Homicide Squad sped to the scene but had not made a thorough investigation last night.

The police communicated with every apartment from which any response could be had, but did not examine those in which tenants failed to answer knocks or phone calls. It was ascertained that the message was not phoned through the apartment house switchboard, but it might have been made through one of a number of private telephones in the building.

Tenants in the building who were questioned stated they had heard no unusual noises during the evening, and several pointed out that if they heard any shots they probably attributed them to firecrackers. Police have no idea as to the method used by the supposed murderer and suicide, as their mysterious informant neglected to state whether it was a shooting, strangling, poisoning or stabbing case.

FLIER FAILS TO BEAT LINDBERGH'S RECORD

Collins Lands in New York Approximately Two Hours Under Mark.

HEAD WINDS BAR RECORD

New York, July 4 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Bucking stiff headwinds nearly the whole way, James H. Collins, former Army aviator, tonight completed his transcontinental flight from Burbank, Calif., when at 9:03 (E. S. T.) he landed at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, 16 hours and 30 minutes after his take-off, good time for the hop, but not good enough to break Col. Lindbergh's record of 14 hours and 45 minutes.

Cramped from the long ride in his low-wing monoplane, Collins got wearily but cheerfully out of the plane and promised soon to make another assault on the record which the flying colonel established last Easter on a flight with his wife, the former Anne Morrow.

He told of encountering robust winds the whole way and at all altitudes. He tried flying at all altitudes up to 10,000 feet, he said, but without being able to lessen the opposition. "Otherwise," he said, "it was an easy flight."

He skimmed down to an unpretentious landing much to the surprise of the officials, and some 5,000 persons who were about to give him up for the night, after the 7:15 (E. S. T.) deadline for a new record had passed by without a sign of him.

An aerial fireworks display was on when his plane hummed up out of the west and only the usual night lights were on at the borders of the field. As soon as he was sighted the spectators immediately lost interest in the aerial show, landing lights were turned on, and the other planes taking part in the maneuvers politely got out of the way so Collins could land.

Collins lost time chiefly on the first leg from Burbank to Wichita, Kans., where he landed eight hours and a minute from the time of his take-off. It took the Lindberghs only 6 hours and 56 minutes for this first lap. Although behind schedule, Collins nevertheless pushed on in the hope of catching up on the second leg of the journey.

His scarlet, yellow-winged plane is a new type of the Lockheed-Sirius in which Col. Lindbergh made his own flight. It carries only 300 gallons of fuel, however, in contrast with the 450-gallon capacity of the Lindbergh plane. It has a two-passenger cabin and two outside cockpits.

Two Student Fliers Die In Missouri Plane Crash

Neosho, Mo., July 4 (A.P.).—Two student fliers were killed here early tonight when an airplane in which they were riding went out of control and crashed two blocks from the business section. Richard North, jr., 17 years old, of Neosho, the pilot, burned to death in the wreckage.

George Staats, of Siloam Springs, Ark., who was on a wing, apparently attempting to repair an aileron, jumped just before the plane struck, and was killed.

Big Statue of Washington Is Unveiled at Rapid City

Face of Country's Founder Revealed as Reminder of Nation's Glory in Rushmore Memorial; Sculptor Borglum Speaks.

Rapid City, N. Dak., July 4 (A.P.).—Gutzon Borglum's gigantic face of George Washington, carved on Mount Rushmore's granite cliff, today was revealed as a reminder through the centuries of the historical foundation of the United States.

In simple impressive Independence Day ceremonies in the heart of South Dakota's Black Hills, an audience of 2,500 witnessed the unveiling of the 60-foot head of the first President of the United States, the first unit of Mount Rushmore National Memorial.

On the Nation's birthday, a patriotic note was sounded by the speakers in the mountain setting near the center of the North American continent.

"America's Shrine for Political Democracy," the monument was called by Joseph S. Cullinan, of Houston, Tex., chairman of the Federal commission in charge of Borglum's massive project.

Borglum said it was a monument to the aspirations of a great people, not to individual men. The sculptor told the audience that the monument "would include the heads of Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, along with a brief history of the Nation's founding and expansion to be written by former President Calvin Coolidge."

Washington's head appears high on the granite cliff at an elevation of 6,200 feet above sea level. Pine and spruce trees are dense at the foot and stretch for miles over the rugged blank hills.

Ceremonies were held at noon today on the veranda of Borglum's studio on Doane Mountain, almost under Rushmore Memorial. The crowd gathered on boulders and under trees in a rustic setting.

Doane Robinson, of Pierre, S. Dak., who first proposed the Black Hills Memorial, described it a success without the necessity of completion of the figures of three other Presidents.

"On this mountain top America today enshrines her sturdy sires," Robinson said.

CANNON DENOUNCED IN SENATE'S RECORD

CAPT. FITZHUGH AUTHOR

The Senate fired a parting shot at Bishop James Cannon, jr., just before it adjourned by granting unanimous consent for insertion in the Congressional Record of an 8,000 word denunciation of the bishop's bucket shop operations, his subsequent explanations, and his protestations of repentance when confronted with the prospect of an ecclesiastical trial at the recent Dallas conference.

The statement was prepared by Capt. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, Tenn., who, together with Josephus Daniels, filed the charges against the bishop at the Methodist conference. It was inserted in the Record at the request of Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, after Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, had asked to have printed a resolution adopted by the conference which, he said, disproved any assertions that the Southern Methodist Church had not taken an uncompromising stand against all forms of gambling. An objection by a single senator—and there were approximately 70 on the floor—would have excluded the statement.

Repented to Escape Trial.

Mr. Fitzhugh accused the bishop of "improper and immoral conduct" of violation of both civil and ecclesiastical law, of having made false statements to justify his conduct to his fellow Methodists, of having repented only to escape a trial, and declared of the committee on episcopacy which first indicted the bishop and then pardoned him that "it saved him from a trial, but it put the church itself on trial."

"If I believed that Bishop Cannon was sincere in his plea for clemency," Mr. Fitzhugh said, "I would be the last person to utter a word of criticism, notwithstanding it came only after a trial had been ordered and an indictment found, and notwithstanding that he has been perhaps more censorious and intolerant of the conduct and beliefs of others than any prominent citizen in America."

But, Mr. Fitzhugh went on, "the time required for Bishop Cannon to realize that he should confess to some degree of impropriety and misconduct and to an unconscious violation of the law of a sovereign State as well as a violation of the moral code, the law of the church, and his consecration vows, furnishes some food for reflection, especially in view of the fact that he had persistently and repeatedly for almost a year denied that there was anything improper in his trancasctions after he had given careful consideration to the question, both of the propriety and morality of a bishop engaging in such transactions, and also especially in view further of the correspondence with the bucket shop at the time the transactions were going on."

Correspondence With Firm.

The correspondence here referred to was the bishop's communications with Kable & Co., after having been impounded for more than a year by District Attorney Tuttle in New York.

When the bishop first appeared before the episcopacy committee, Mr. Fitzhugh revealed, he attempted to defend his speculations and when asked if he was sorry, replied "I am sorry I lost my $2,500."

How the bishop's activity proved costly to a correligionist is recalled by Mr. Fitzhugh's statement that among the evidence offered to the sposcopacy committee was "an affidavit of a Methodist who had seen him in this bucket shop and who had lost money in it because he thought if the bishop was a patron that the concern must be all right."

"But we are told we should no longer complain, because the bishop has been sent to Africa," Mr. Fitzhugh said. "This is another regrettable consequence of the irregular and unauthorized action of the committee on episcopacy in passing his character in the face of untried charges of immoral conduct, which continues him in office, but with limitations, express or implied. He himself knew that he would not be acceptable to the conferences in America; therefore, he must be sent to the heathen, who of all persons in the world should have as a spiritual guide one above reproach."

THREE RACING BAGS SIGHTED ON COURSE

the "E. H. Brown" he had registered as his aide was his daughter, Mrs. E. H. Brown, of Evansville, Ind. She, too, was left among the groundlings.

The Hineman-Honeywell incident was an involved one, which began with the St. Louis veterans agreement, before reaching Houston, to turn over to Hineman one of his two balloons. Yesterday afternoon, however, it was discovered that the Hineman craft had a torn envelope and Honeywell promptly offered to give up his personal balloon to the other and withdraw.

To forestall this, the race committee phoned Brig. Gen. Frank Lahm of San Antonio, who agreed to allow the use of the spare balloon here on his understanding that it was to represent the City of Houston. The bag, however, was made available to Hineman, and Honeywell expected to use his own.

This afternoon Gen. Lahm, arriving at the race field as a spectator, noted that Hineman proposed to use the Army balloon as the standard bearer of a commercial enterprise and demurred, saying he had authorized the craft to be used only that Houston might have an entry.

Auto and Violence Deaths Show Drop

106 Suicides During Last 12 Months, Says Report of Police Official.

Deaths from violence and traffic accidents have decreased in the District during the fiscal year just ended, according to statistics compiled by Lieut. L. I. H. Edwards, in charge of the personnel work in the Police Department.

In the fiscal year ending June 30 deaths from violence totaled 346, a decrease of 9, compared with the previous corresponding period. Traffic deaths declined from 89 to 68 in the period.

There were 91 homicide victims during the two-year period, 50 in 1929 and 41 in 1930. Suicides in the last twelve months totaled 106, an increase of 6 compared with the previous period. In the two years there were 247 deaths from accidents other than traffic, 131 in the past twelve months and 116 during the previous fiscal year.

ETHICS CODE DRAWN FOR UNIVERSITY MEN

Professors Must Not Accept Pay From Private Firms for Research.

PRINCIPLES LAID DOWN

The college or university professor must not accept compensation from any private corporation for the pursuit of investigation if the subject of the research is related to actual or probable questions of controversial public policy, according to the report of the committee on ethics of the American Association of University Professors in the last issue of the association's bulletin.

Nor is it proper for an educational institution to receive aid from a corporation in carrying on research if controversial public policies are involved.

This report, prepared by Prof. E. R. A. Seligman, of Columbia University, at the request of the committee, is the result of the recent governmental inquiries into the propaganda activities carried on by public utility corporations, and particularly of the charges that individuals of the academic profession had become agents of the propaganda.

Principles for Future.

"The purpose of this report is not to tell the public utilities what to do or to send them any homilies," says the report. "We shall have quite enough to do to recall to our own members in the academic profession a sense of their obligations. Our object is to lay down a set of principles to be followed in the future."

According to the findings, "very few cases are noted of alleged impropriety on the part of regular instructors in the academic departments" of institutions "or of teachers of economics in the schools of business or elsewhere. In almost every case of alleged improper activity the individual in question was either a subordinate instructor or connected with the extension department or some technical day or night school."

Honesty Is Unimpeached.

The report holds further that the honesty of offending instructors can not be impeached. These instructors "were lacking in the tact that was necessary or perhaps in an appreciation of the gravity of the situation."

But, however innocent the professor may be, the report points out, it is vital both to industry and to education that not the slightest suspicion be incurred by anyone in the academic ranks.

"The university professor must be like the judge," added the report. "His reputation for impartiality must be equally unsullied."

Documents Reveal Declaration Origin

Historic Exhibit Opened on "Fourth" at Library of Congress.

Documents illustrating development of the Declaration of Independence were placed on exhibition yesterday at the Library of Congress in connection with the national observance of Independence Day. The exhibit of eleven documents will be on display for an indefinite period.

These papers, in a case adjacent to the shrine containing the original Declaration, show that instrument as having its origin in the first three propositions of the Virginia Bill of Rights, by George Mason; in Thomas Jefferson's preamble to the Virginia Constitution, and in Richard Henry Lee's motion in the Continental Congress, which, in turn, was based upon the instructions of the Virginia convention of 1776 to the Virginia delegates to the Continental Congress.

The eleven documents, with one exception, were taken from the collections of the library following the addition to them of papers owned by William E. Benjamin, of New York.

DISTRICT MEASURE FIGHT IS PROBABLE

Mere Fact of Closing Does Not Stop Chicago Boys From Full Dance.

SEEK CAPITAL GANG, TOO

The 1931 District appropriation bill is a law, but the bitter Senate and House fight it precipitated threatens to flare up again at the next session. Unless something unforeseen happens, the adjournment will be merely an interlude, a rest between rounds.

Three resolutions that might solve the problem were introduced, but none of them was acted on.

They were introduced by three men who are extremely anxious to bring an end to the annual battle over the question of how much the Federal Government should contribute toward the support of the District Government—Senator Wesley Jones (Republican), of Washington; Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut, and Representative R. Walton Moore (Republican), of Virginia.

The resolutions, though they provide for a different set-up, have the same purpose—the creation of a commission to study the fiscal relations question and to make a recommendation as to what the Federal contribution should be.

Likely to Cause Fight.

Even these resolutions are likely to bring about a fight, for, unless he has undergone a change of heart, Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), of Nebraska, is not ready to agree to any one of them.

The aftermath of the fight over the 1931 District bill, a fight from which the Senate emerged victoriously after forcing the House to agree to a Federal contribution of $9,500,000, was marked by plenty of evidence that another battle looms for the session beginning in December.

Representative Simmons put through a resolution providing for the creation of a committee of seven, whose duty it would be to make a study of the fiscal relations question and the taxation situation here in general.

Mr. Simmons' committee would consist entirely of House members, whereas the commission's suggestion in the other bills would include members of both houses, other Government officials and possibly prominent citizens.

The committee undoubtedly will favor a small Federal contribution, and also probably will recommend a more drastic taxation system for the city.

Mr. Simmons conceived the idea of such an investigation at the height of the battle over the District bill, at a time when he was fighting mad. It is his contention that if a tax is placed on many things that are not now taxed, there will be no excuse for a bigger Federal contribution.

Mr. Simmons, contrary to what many persons think, will again be chairman of the District appropriations subcommittee at the next session. He is not scheduled to be promoted to the agriculture subcommittee until the next congress.

And then there was the parting shot of Representative Louis C. Cramton (Republican), of Michigan, the man who first sponsored the $9,000,000 lump sum when the city's expenses were being borne on a 60-40 basis.

After the House had agreed Thursday evening to the $9,500,000 figure, Mr. Cramton warned that this action should not be regarded as a precedent. It did not mean that $9,500,000 is to be granted again next year, he said, nor even that $9,000,000 was to be granted.

near third base. Smith said that the seats were on the extreme corner of the grandstand near the bleachers. He tried to approach Glassman but the latter hastily departed, Smith told police. Glassman was charged with selling baseball tickets in a public place.

The six others were taken in custody between 12:30 o'clock and 1:30 o'clock at Seventh street and Florida avenue northwest by Eighth Precinct Detective W. R. Laflin and Policeman E. Barrett, both in plainclothes, who said they observed the men doing a flourishing business. They said the half-dozen were scalping grand-stand seats.

Two were taken together. They were Martin Kline, 29 years old, and Arthur Abrams, 32 years old, both of Philadelphia. The others, all arrested individually, were Oscar Metz, 40 years old, a painter, of Park road near Georgia avenue northwest; Benjamin Fletcher, 28 years old, a clerk of N street near Thirteenth street northwest; Joseph Prulitsky, 23 years old, a chauffeur, of Twenty-fourth street near L street northwest; and Martin Johnson, 21 years old, of H street near Ninth street northwest. All except Johnson was released on $500 bond.

Seventeen colored youths, a 6-year-old white boy and a 67-year-old Negro were nabbed by Eighth Precinct police early yesterday afternoon near Griffith Stadium on charges of soliciting parking from motorists attending the baseball games.

The activity followed a roundup of 18 other youngsters, mostly Negroes, in the same area on Wednesday afternoon. As was the case Wednesday, the 19 taken yesterday were booked at the precinct station and released on $5 collateral each. The youths under 17 years will face Juvenile Court today, while the others will be tried in Police Court.

The drive against the "watch-your-car" clan was launched by Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police, after complaints had been made that the solicitors frequently made reprisals by letting air from tires and damaging cars of motorists who declined to hire them.

Policeman Arresting Pair Is Badly Bitten

Private Joseph P. Comiskey, of the Fourth Precinct, was injured yesterday when, it is alleged, he was assaulted with a bottle and bitten by a colored couple he was placing under arrest. The two, Francis Boston, 30 years old, and his wife, Alberta, both of Desmonds court southwest, were charged at Fourth Precinct with assault.

The policeman was treated at Emergency Hospital for a fracture of a finger on his right hand, bruises of the head and bites on his left side. He said that the man hit him with a bottle, while the woman did the biting.

recommendation for executive clemency."

The decision added another disappointment to the many experienced by Mooney since February 10, 1917, when he was convicted and sentenced to be hanged. Billings had received a life term.

Presidential intervention by Woodrow Wilson won a commutation from the Governor of California for Mooney. Mooney's friends charged police were panic-stricken at inability to fix the crime on the perpetrators and manufactured evidence against the defendants.

COOLIDGE BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED ON 4TH

COLUMN IS MENTIONED

Northampton, Mass., July 4 (A.P.). Since the days when his mail came addressed to "His Honor, the Mayor of Northampton," until today, two years after his retirement as President, Calvin Coolidge has received a card of greeting from a woman in a little backwoods town in Vermont. For the past twenty years she always remembered that July 4 was Mr. oolidge's birthday.

When the former President went to his office today he found a bundle of greeting cards, which, he said, in their scope represented a cross-section of the American people. Former members of his Cabinet, Washington officials and many of the rank and file of the country remembered his fifty-eighth birthday. All pleased the former Chief Executive, but the one from the woman in Vermont, whose identity he declined to reveal, was of especial interest. Included in the number were several from children who called attention to the fact that they too were celebrating a birthday in addition to the birthday of the United States.

Many families here sent flowers picked from their gardens, old friends made personal visits and Mr. Coolidge's former chef on the presidential yacht Mayflower sent a large cake from New York.

The former President said his mail also contained several responses to newspaper articles he has been writing. Somes of these, he said, came from "high sources."

Latin-American Editors Protest Fliers' Use of Gas

San Salvador, July 4 (A.P.).—A group of eight Latin-American journalists today sent to President Hoover a letter protesting against the alleged use of asphyxiating gases by United States aviators bombing a Sandiasta stronghold in Nicaragua.

The letter was signed by Ernesto Carrera, Mario Santacruz, Luis Felipe Recines, Juan J. Valencia, Jorge Pinto, J. C. Gonzalez, Max Jimenez Guillen and Juan Felipe Toruno.

Earl Shutts, South Parkersburg, said he made unsuccessful efforts to rescue the men.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

NOW, come fellows, altogether—let's give that boy Walter Newton a hand. He has had his traducers around here these many months. There have been critics who said that as a presidential counselor he was not doing so well.

I have not been able to keep a close enough check on him to know whether the criticism is merited or not. There is, however, no escaping this fact. Mr. Newton finished the session with Congress in a blaze of glory. His enemies won't like that but facts, like pigs, is facts.

* * * *

IT was the last two weeks of the session that the gentleman struck his high batting stride. His standing was just about 1.000 instead of the good average of 300 per cent.

Take, for example, when the stolid House lost its stolidness and surrendered to its suppressed desires and passed a veterans' bill that was generally tamped as a disgraceful legislative act.

The mood of the House was ugly. It looked angrily at its friends and critics alike with an attitude of "Well, what of it? We not only passed the bill, but we intend to pass it over the President's veto."

* * * *

THE credit for straightening out this debacle has been generally given to Speaker Longworth. But Mr. Newton had his hands in what work was done. He just sort of circulated among his former colleagues with something like this: "The chief is blistering mad. I can't calm him down. He intends to fight you fellows in your campaign for reelection. I don't suppose I have ever seen him so hot."

The Republican gentlemen of the House gave ear. They gave heart and finally they decided they did not want to be disorderly after all.

* * * *

THEN when they substituted their denounced legislation with a pension bill the Senate boosted the pension rates which created another situation. What would the veterans do to them if they refused to agree to the higher Senate rates? They do not know yet. But they do know this.

Mr. Newton came again amongst them with a little story something like this: "Gosh, I am afraid the President is going to veto the rivers and harbors bill. At least, he isn't going to sign it until he finds out what the pension rates are to be." This little story even crept into the newspapers.

It so happens that there is more or at least as much pork in the rivers and harbors bill as there is in the pension bill.

The members of the House are naive fellows. Back home within the confines of their district they are very pompous and self-assured. They are lost in the maze that is the Nation's Capital.

It was not for them to reason that about the last thing the President would veto was the rivers and harbors bill, inasmuch as it carries waterway development so closely associated with his administration. But the story did the work. They stayed in line on the pension bill.

Mr. Newton is good; sometimes, in fact, worth his weight in gold.

RIVER-HARBOR BILL SIGNED BY HOOVER

HUGE CHANNEL PROJECT

(Associated Press)

President Hoover signed a rivers and harbors bill yesterday which in his own words authorizes a larger project than the Panama Canal.

In a statement issued after he had attached his signature the Chief Executive enumerated three prospective benefits which may come from the measure.

Among its major projects, the act provides for the Government to take over the Erie and Oswego Canals and the Illinois water, and for a 9-foot channel in the upper Mississippi between the mouth of the Illinois and St. Paul and Minneapolis, a 6-foot channel in the upper Missouri from Kansas City to Sioux City, a 9-foot channel on the Tennessee from its mouth to Knoxville.

Others include channel deepening along the Great Lakes, work along the St. Lawrence waterway, and a Lake Okeechobee flood control project, in addition to numerous smaller harbor and waterway developement activities.

Text of Hoover's Statement.

The text of President Hoover's statement follows:

"It was with particular satisfaction that I signed the rivers and harbors bill as it represents the final authorization of the engineering work by which we construct and coordinate our great system of waterways and harbors, which I have advocated for over five years; it was promised in the last campaign and in my recommendations to Congress.

"We can now build the many remaining segments of a definite canalization of our river systems through which modern barge trains of 10,000 to 15,000 tons of burden can operate systematically through the Midwest and to the Gulf of Mexico, and through the lakes to the Atlantic. The system, when completed, will have 12,000 miles of waterways and will give waterway connection between such great cities as New Orleans, Memphis, Knoxville, Chattanooga, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Sioux City, Keokuk, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, Evansville, Cincinnati, Wheeling and Pittsburg. Through the Great Lakes and the Erie Canal many of these points will have access to central New York and the Atlantic. By its authorization for deepening of lake channels we shall support the present commerce of the Great Lakes and make preparation for ocean shipping by the ultimate deepening of the St. Lawrence. It authorizes numerous improvements in our harbors.

"It is a long view plan for the future. It will require many years to complete its construction. I do not propose that we should proceed in a haphazard manner, but that we should approach the problem on sound engineering lines, completing the main trunk systems and gradually extending the work outward along the lateral rivers.

"Some of the items authorized have not yet been recommended by the engineers, and of course they will not be undertaken unless they are so recommended.

No Increase in Budget.

"The bill does not call for any increase in the budget for this fiscal year, the appropriations having been provided by which work will be pushed at all available points in assistance to the temporary unemployment situation.

"I have, in cooperation with Secretary Hurley, established during the last year, a new organization for the conduct of these works. In this organization we have created under Gen. Lytle Brown eight separate divisions, headed by responsible directing engineers, as follows: Great Lakes Division, Col. E. M. Markham; Upper Mississippi Valley, Lieut. Col. G. S. Spalding; Lower Mississippi Valley, Brig. Gen. T. H. Jackson; North Atlantic Division, Col. W. J. Borden; South Atlantic Division, Col. H. B. Ferguson; Gulf Division, Lieut. Col. Mark Brook; North Pacific Division, CoCl. G. Sukesli; South Pacific Division, Lieut. Col. T. M. Robins.

"In aggregate this inland waterway undertaking represents a larger project than even the Panama Canal. It will provide employment for thousands of men. It should be fruitful of decreased transportation charges on bulk goods, should bring great benefits to our farms and to our industries. It should result in a better distribution of population away from the congested centers."

chase but was quickly outdistanced. The baby was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Late in the afternoon, Saul G. Arnoff, 11 years old, of Baltimore, while walking at First and G streets northwest was painfully burned about the right leg in the explosion of a giant firecracker thrown at him by two men from a parked automobile, bearing a Virginia tag. The boy's father, Arnoff, started to remonstrate with the pair. One of the men flashed a pistol and told Arnoff to "beat it."

While the youth was being treated at Sibley Hospital, Arnoff reported the incident to Sixth Precinct police. Policemen L. Bailes and W. P. Burroughs shortly afterward spotted the coupe parked in front of an apartment at Third and G streets northwest. Two men who left the apartment a few moments later and started to get in the car were arrested.

The pair, both held for investigation at the precinct station, gave their names as Elmer Altizer, 34 years old, of Richlands, Va., and Frank Jewett, 23 years old, of the Astoria apartments, Third and G streets northwest. Police said they found a quantity of firecrackers in the machine. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson last night viewed the two men, but failed to make positive identification. Police intend to have Arnoff face the pair today.

Boy's Hand Injured.

Kenneth Swann, 9 years old, of 643 East Capitol street, was treated for burns, at Casualty Hospital, received, when a firecracker exploded in his hand.

Premature explosion of a salute inflicted burns on the left shoulder of Eugene Laurie, 9 years old, of 1625 Rosedale street northeast. He was also treated at Casualty Hospital.

Injured when a firecracker he was holding in his mouth exploded, a child named Kelly, first name unknown, was treated at Emergency Hospital. The child, 4 years old, was brought in by friends of his parents, who said he lived in Bon Air, Va. The little boy was burned around the mouth and his lips were lacerated, but his condition is not serious, and he was taken home.

Samuel Mosley, colored, 12 years old, of 1452 T street northwest was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for burns on the hand caused by a cap pistol. After treatment he went home.

Ralph Clinton, of 1120½ Florida avenue northwest, was burned about the face and left hand last night at Seventeenth and B streets northeast by a firecracker. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Two Silver Spring youths were injured yesterday by firecrackers with which they were celebrating the Fourth of July.

W. R. Van Horn, 5809 Sligo Mill road, was burned on the left hand with a firecracker which exploded prematurely. He was treated at Walter Reed Hospital and returned to his home.

Firecracker Explodes Early.

John Oden, jr., 13 years old, of Silver Spring, was badly burned under the chin when a firecracker he was holding exploded in his hand. His chin and chest were burned. He was treated by his family physician.

Belated explosion of a firecracker he had picked up to examine burned Alfred Joel, colored, 14 years old, on the right hand early last night in front of his home at 1809 Benning road northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Wilson Jones, 14 years old, of 206 Fourteenth street northeast, suffered lacerations of the right hand and neck last night in front of his home when a firecracker exploded in his hand. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Claude Woods, colored, 27 years old, of 1250 Boulevard road northeast, suffered burns about the right eye last night at his home when a lighted sparkler was stuck in his face in play by a woman friend. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Treatment also was given at the hospital last night to Victor Laceny, 13 years old, of 3047 Douglas street northeast, for burns about the right hand received in the premature explosion of a firecracker at Fair Haven, Md.

Jeanette Davis, of R. F. D. No. 1, Alexandria, Va., was treated at the Alexandria Hospital for an injury to her eye caused by the premature explosion of a firecracker.

RAIL HOLDING DATA BRANDED STARTLING

(Associated Press.)

The initial investigation into railroad ownership by the House interstate commerce committee was described yesterday by Representative Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, as having "disclosed startling facts as to the far-reaching control of some of the Nation's major railroad systems by uncontrolled holding and investment trust companies."

Rayburn, ranking minority member of the committee, made public a special report submitted to him by Dr. W. M. W. Splawn, chief investigator, on investment trust companies. Chairman Parker, of the committee, this week made public an interim report on the holding company phase of the inquiry.

Extent of Holdings.

The report of Rayburn showed that of 110 investment trust companies, having a capital and surplus in excess of $5,000,000 each, 50 held railroad voting securities, while it has not been determined whether 28 others held such securities.

Although the report did not divulge names of the investment companies, it said 1 held voting securities in 50 railroad lines, while 23 were said to hold securities of the Alleghany Corporation, the holding company dominated by the Van Sweringen interests, of Cleveland.

In addition, the report said, eight investment trust companies held voting securities in the Chesapeake Holding Co; six in the Pennroad Holding Co., dominated by the Pennsylvania Railroad, and three in the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Holding Co.

It said investment trust companies held on January 1, 1930, 36 per cent of the New York Central securities; 34 per cent of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe; 33 per cent of the Union Pacific; 29 per cent of the Pennsylvania; 20 per cent of the Baltimore & Ohio; 18 per cent in the Chesapeake & Ohio; Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; Southern, and Southern Pacific, and 15 per cent in the Canadian Pacific, the Missouri Pacific and the New York New Haven & Hartford.

Guide For New Laws.

"If the disclosures in the remainder of the inquiry are comparable to the development in the preliminary stage," Rayburn said, "I fear that some of these tremendously strong financial organizations have a greater influence in the field of transportation than any one organization should have."

The investigation was instituted to determine what legislation is necessary to bring holding and investment companies under Government jurisdiction in order that the policy of merging the Nation's 1,500 lines into 21 great competitive systems may be carried out.

CAPITAL CELEBRATES FOURTH WITH RITES

who had been scheduled for the reading, was called out of the city.

Probably the most colorful features of the program were the torchlight procession of color guards and uniformed bodies and the massing of colors by the patriotic and veterans organizations. Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, who acted as marshal of the latter parade, led the spectators in repeating the oath of allegiance to the flag.

Throngs Rush to Seats.

Following the pronouncement of the benediction by the Rev. Francis J. Hurney and the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," the special guests in the reserved seat section were turned loose to find the bleachers on the opposite side of the Monument from which they were to watch the fireworks.

To the dismay of a large proportion of them, however, they found the seats for which they held tickets were already filled with persons who bought tickets while the service was in progress.

There was much confusion and much grumbling on the part of scores who were forced to fight their way in an already packed throng. Many went directly home without awaiting the pyrotechnic display.

Among the novelty fireworks was a "U. S. N." dirigible that had a fire-shooting propeller. Lighted sketches of President Hoover, George Washington and the Statue of Liberty, also drew favorable "ahs."

Policeman Is Injured.

Policeman T. A. Schultz, of the First Precinct, though off duty, was severely burned when struck by a parachute flare dropped from an airplane early in the outburst. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

At least one boy was temporarily lost. He was Clay C. Tarmon, 12 years old, of Falls Church, Va., who wandered away from his brother.

The airplane demonstration, which was scheduled to precede the fireworks, failed to materialize, though a single-lighted plane from Bolling Field circled the grounds a few times. The huge searchlights of the 260th Coast Guard Artillery, District National Guard, which were slated to pick out the aircraft in a mimic battle, spent their rays on toy balloons. Their guns boomed, however, while the atmosphere around them quivered.

Community observance drew hundreds of frolickers, a large proportion of them children. Room on golf courses, tennis courts and in swimming pools was at a premium. And the Griffith Stadium was literally packed to the gates.

Even some policemen smiled reminiscently and turned their backs as children gleefully set off fireworks in sedate residential sections throughout the day. While the fun was in progress in the suburbs, the business district was oddly quiet, with practically all industry at a standstill.

Scouts Assist Police.

Special details of Metropolitan and United States Park Police handled the long lines of congested traffic, while Girl and Boy Scouts acted as aids to various officials.

All-day celebrations, including athletic events, costume parades, and fireworks, were held at the Burroughs Recreation Park and in the Petworth, Takoma Park and Wesley Heights communities. The Association of Oldest Inhabitants and the Society of Natives held a patriotic service at the Epiphany Church Parish Hall.

Observances characterized chiefly by sporting events were held at the various camps operated by organizations affiliated with the Community Chest. Nearby resorts on the Chesapeake Bay were filled with merry-makers who also staged miniature celebrations.

C.M.T.C. RECRUITS OBSERVE HOLIDAY

Fort Eustis Is Opened With 2,000 Embryo Officers Taking Oath.

'WAR' TRAINING PLANNED

The spirit of Old Glory was instilled in the hearts of several thousand young men yesterday who are receiving their first taste of army life in citizens' military training camps in the Third Corps area, comprising recruits from the District of Columbia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Virginia.

Ceremonies, appropriate to the day, were conducted at Fort Myer, Fort Washington, Fort Hoyle and the other encampments. Last night the boys at Fort Myer obtained a clear view of the firework display in the Monument Grounds, having box seats in the Virginia hills.

The C. M. T. C. Camp at Fort Eustis, Va., offically opened yesterday with 2,000 candidates taking the oath of allegiance to their country at a ceremony in the camp grove. An address of welcome was delivered by Col. Alfred T. Smith, commanding the Thirty-fourth Infantry, who will be the post commander during the C. M. T. C. period. The oath of allegiance was administered by Capt. Charles R. Jones, of the Thirty-fourth Infantry, the adjutant for the citizen soldiers during the month of training.

Representative Bland Speaks.

Addresses were also made to the young soldiers by Representative S. O. Bland, of Virginia, and Prof. George E. Brooks, of the College of William and Mary at Williamsburg. The invocation was offered by Chaplain Ivan L. Bennett, in charge of religious activities at Fort Eustis. Music was played by the Thirty-fourth Infantry Band.

Beginning today, battlefield exercises will commence at Fort George G. Meade, in which regular Army, National Guard and organized reserves will participate. These exercises will be the first of their kind to be held in the Third Corps Area since the World War. Parts in the exercises will be taken by 181 regular officers, 212 National Guard and 273 organized reserve officers. A feature of the exercises will be an attempted repulsion of an invasion of the Third Corps Area.

Defensive 'War' Planned.

The first week of the exercises will be consumed in preparing for a defense against the attack. The general situation will embrace two nations, one belligerent and the other nonbelligerent. The warlike nation, known as the reds, will be composed of a cavalry division and four infantry, divisions and they will land on a front consisting of Annapolis and Herring Bay. The blues, the defensive nation, will consist of regulars, national guards and reserves of the third corps area. The war will continue until July 19 when the camp will close.

More than 300 cadets from West Point and several hundred from Annapolis who have been taking courses in tank study and aviation at Fort George G. Meade will leave today.

Philadelphia's war regiment, the 304th combat engineers, will be mobilized tomorrow under orders of the War Department for a period of training at Camp Humphreys, Va. The regiment will be in command of Col. Charles D. Young.

NATION'S EDUCATORS HEAR FINLEY SPEECH

IS "LAW OF UNIVERSE"

Columbus, Ohio., July 4 (A.P.).—While members of the National Education Association celebrated the anniversary of American Independence Day today, John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, called upon them to recognize that destiny is fast increasing interdependence among nations.

Mr. Finley spoke at the closing session of the association's sixty-eighth annual convention. The new president, Dr. Willis A. Sutton, of Atlanta, Ga., was installed at this session and Los Angeles was selected as the 1931 meeting place.

So vast are our boundaries becoming, in the sense of interdependence, that the Angel Gabriel on Judgment today might well be able to discard his trumpet for the radio, which at that time will reach every human being at the self-same moment, Boston to Bombay and back again, the speaker said.

"On this day of Independence," he said, "I would repeat in peace the word which was on our lips in war—interdependence—to make and keep the whole world, and not patches of it here and there, a fit place to which we may conscientiously invite children to come and go to school.

"Self-determination is a brave word if it thought only of self. Interword if it thought only of self. Interdependence is the law of the universe from the atoms to the stars. Our supreme national achievement has been the demonstration of the practicability of federation on a large scale," he said. He quoted John Fisk as prophesying 50 years ago that it would become desirable at the end of a century for the States of Europe to enter into a federal union.

"We are only a half century on the way from the time when that prophecy was made, but Europe is already astir with that vision," Mr. Finley said.

In agriculture, in mineralogy, in aestheticism and in culture the law of interdependence is demonstrating itself, he said.

The children of America, he predicted, will be the leaders of an interdependent civilization.

FLAMING BODY FOUND ON NEW YORK STREET

police first to accept the theory that he was a hanger-on of the Bronx building racket who had, somehow, contrived to be put on the spot. Then, later, they dismissed this idea and supplanted it with another.

The second was that Brinkman, who probably had for associates a number of gangsters, had got into a fight with some of them. He had, the detectives theorized, been dealt a paralyzing blow with a bottle or something, and then, just to play safe and get him out of the way, police decided that those with whom Brinkman had been fighting calmly shot him several times and then burned his body to destroy any evidence of a fight.

Detroit, Mich., July 4 (A.P.).—Police believed tonight that three women held the key to the gangland execution of two Chicago hoodlums and the wounding of another man last night near the heart of Detroit's downtown district.

One is Mrs. Julia Kuffel Connors, widow of a Chicago racketeer who was killed nine months ago, and more recently a sweetheart of William Cannon, one of the assassin's victims last night.

Another is known as Lou McDonald, said by police to be the common law wife of George Collins, the other hoodlum, who died from a gangster bullet in last night's killings.

The other woman is Mrs. Mabel Barrett, sister of Cannon. She lives at the La Salle Hotel, by the side of which the three men were shot down, and had talked to Cannon by telephone earlier in the day. At first police suspected she had "put them on the spot." This theory was dropped when it was learned she had merely discussed with her brother the condition of their mother, ill in Receiving Hospital. Police are convinced, however, she can shed light on her brother's activities which will help solve the crime.

The McDonald woman was arrested early this morning when she visited the county morgue and identified Collins' body as that of a man who had visited her several times within the last two years.

The police believed that the slayings were the outgrowth of liquor traffic between Detroit and Illinois cities.

The two slain gangsters were William Cannon and George Collins. Their companion, Michael Stitzel, was seriously wounded.

A revolver was found by detectives in a clothes hamper in the hotel basement. While not believed to have been the one used in the shooting, it was turned over to firearms experts for examination.

Collins has a Detroit police record, having been picked up for investigation in connection with numerous holdups and kidnapings several years ago.

Both Collins and Cannon were known to Detroit and Chicago authorities as liquor runners. Stitzel who claims he knew nothing of their activities, was a doorman at "Lefty" Clark's gambling house when it flourished in downtown Detroit some time ago.

raises a situation that must be dealt with in some manner, however.

Other G. O. P. Problems.

One suggestion heard is that Commissioner of Internal Revenue Lucas might be made sort of a Republican Jouett Shouse. To all intents and purposes, Mr. Shouse is the chairman of the Democratic national committee, yet he is not really that. He is batting for Mr. Raskob while the latter, holding on to the title, effaces himself.

The Republicans have more than Mr. Huston as a problem, however, and they have got to get together pretty soon to get many tangles straightened out.

Senator George H. Moses, chairman of the senatorial campaign committee, has a business man treasurer on his hands in the person of Theodore Gary, of Kansas City, the man who makes the automatic telephones. Mr. Gary has said apropos the forthcoming senatorial campaign that inasmuch as he is the man who must make the affidavits on campaign expenditures he is the one who will do the expending.

Senator Moses denies that there is any conflict between him and Mr. Gary, but Mr. Gary is known to have taken the stand attributed to him and that being the case there must be a conflict.

Business men are seldom blessed with the faculty of making little political finesses. A fine pickle the Republicans would be in if in the next campaign they gave an itemized account of every penny they spent. It is not a question of illegal expenditures; it is a question of giving the enemy as few secrets as possible.

Explosion Looked For.

A politically minded treasurer, for example, would give Senator Moses lump sums and without question on his call, and no one knows better than the senator how these lump sums should be disposed of.

And although the senator is maintaining a very negative reserve about this matter, there is every reason to believe that a blow-up is imminent. Treasurers of political committees are not supposed to take their jobs too seriously.

Mr. Gary was given the honor after Senator Moses had first selected Otto H. Kahn. A ruckus was stirred up, and Mr. Kahn very promptly declined to serve. How Mr. Gary was eased into the picture has not been developed.

The fact that he has taken his job seriously is militating against the selection of a "business man" to succeed Mr. Huston. Walter Head, a Nebraska business man, was talked of for some time, but Mr. Gary's attitude just proves that business men do not understand.

HOOVER SUMMONS SENATE TO CONVENE ON MONDAY

committee a week or so ago and Chairman Borah has promised to hold it before the Senate until action has been had.

Comprehensive hearings were held before both the foreign relations and the naval committees where Secretaries Stimson and Adams defended the treaty and various naval officers testified that it did not grant the United States enough 10-inch-gun cruisers for its needs.

There have been no definite predictions of the time that will be necessary for the Senate to dispose of the treaty. The senators, however, are weary from the long months of debate on the tariff and veterans' relief, and hope has been expressed that the session might end within ten days or two weeks.

Call to Senators.

In his call for the special session, the President said:

"Whereas public interests require that the Senate of the United States be convened at 12 o'clock on the 7th day of July next to receive such communications as may be made by the executive and in particular to consider and determine whether the advice and consent of the Senate shall be given to the ratification of a treaty for the limitation and reduction of naval armament, signed at London on April 22, 1930, by the plenipotentiaries of the President of the United States of America, the President of the French Republic, his majesty the King of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British dominions beyond the seas, Emperor of India, his majesty the King of Italy, and his majesty the Emperor of Japan, transmitted to the Senate on May 1, 1930;

"Now, therefore, I, Herbert Hoover, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Senate of the United States to convene at the Capitol, in the City of Washington, on the 7th day of July next, at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as members of that body are hereby required to take notice.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the Great Seal of the United States.

"Done at the City of Washington, this 3rd day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and fifty fourth.

"HERBERT HOOVER

"By the President:
"Wilbur J. Carr,
"Acting Secretary of State."

President Hoover and a small party left the White House yesterday for a week-end at his fishing camp in Virginia.

For the first time in months the President awakened to find Congress out of session and members of his "medicine ball cabinet," who play with him on the south lawn of the White House before breakfast each day, gone from the city.

So, unnoticed by the few persons on the streets, the Chief Executive took an early walk through the business section, accompanied only by two secret service men.

Leaving the White House about 6:30 o'clock, he was out for more than an hour. His route took him through the theater and retail shopping districts, along Pennsylvania avenue and past the huge Department of Commerce Building being built just below the Avenue. This was designed as one of the largest buildings in the world while Mr. Hoover was Secretary of Commerce.

Hoover Ponders Message.

Orange, Va., July 4 (A.P.).—To the same verdant woods where less than a year ago he sat down with Ramsay MacDonald to survey problems of international peace, President Hoover went today to ponder the message that is to urge Congress to ratify the treaty which sprang from that survey.

Except that the leaves are untouched by autumnal chill the scene amid which the President gave thought to his coming struggle with Congress was the same as that which lay before him and the British prime minister as they paced back and forth beside the Rapidan last October.

Much water has gone down the Rapidan since that time and their project has moved forward to the last stages. Each, however, has described it as the first step toward lessening the burdens of armaments and easing frictions among the nations of the world.

The President went to his Virginia retreat today without the large group of guests which usually accompanies him. In the automobile with him were his secretary, Walter Newton; Mrs. Newton and their son, John Marshall. Behind came Lawrence Richey, another secretary.

Guests at Lodge.

Several guests were already at the lodge, but for the most part they were friends of an intimacy dating back to the days when he lived on S street instead on Pennsylvania avenue. Some of them had gone ahead to visit with Mrs. Hoover, who has been there for several weeks recuperating from an injured back.

The President's journey to the camp was slowed by the holiday-clogged roads and various minor delays. At a narrow bridge across the Rappahannock, his party was forced to wait for a herd of cows which had started over the stream ahead of him. A broken spring forced Richey's car to drop out of the party and he joined it later at the camp.

There was no fishing, the Virginia season having closed on June 30, and the presidential party devoted much of the time to riding, walks through the hills and horse shoe pitching. They will remain over the week-end.

Brookhart's Bill Signed by Hoover

$3,000,000 in Belated Pay to Be Given to U. S. Employe Group

The signing of the Brookhart bill by President Hoover late Thursday night means that nearly $3,000,000 in belated pay raises will be distributed among some 45,000 employes of the Federal and District Governments, about 15,000 of whom are in Washington.

The bill, sponsored by Senator Brookhart (Republican), of Iowa, was designed to give employes raises that Congress thought it was giving them in the Welch act of 1928.

The bill does not take care of all employes, however, and there already is talk of additional legislation to provide for those slighted.

Woods Scoured for Boy, Who Fled Home in Ontario

Brother and Sister, Whom he Took Along, Found Safe But Runaway Still Eludes Countryside Searchers, Hindered by Tall Grass.

Kapuskasing, Ontario, July 4 (A.P.). Victor Gareau, 6, who ran away from home Monday with his baby brother and sister, today still eluded searchers who have been beating the bush country around his farm home for four days.

The little girl and the other little boy were found Wednesday after they had hidden from searchers for two days, the distracted voice of their father calling, bringing them out of hiding.

Traces of Victor have been found from time to time but no one has seen him. He apparently is following the procedure all three adopted successfully, of dropping to the ground under a bush or in tall grass whenever searchers approach.

It is not known how the boy has lived, if he has survived, as he took no food with him when he left and the berries and roots he might find in the woods would hardly be sufficient to maintain life for long. His parents, however, hold firm to the belief that he still is alive.

All the countryside has joined in the search. Airplanes were used for a time until it was found that they were of little aid, due to the wooded character of the land which hides objects on the ground from searchers in the air.

A fund has been opened by local citizens to prosecute the search, which is continuing day and night, and to care for the Gareau family, which was found to be in extreme need of financial aid.

CLEAR AWAY!

The closing hours of the session that ended Thursday night marked the total collapse of the Senate coalition and the triumph of the Republican party under the leadership of President Hoover.

Democratic partisanship that went so far as to attack the public welfare was combined with a treacherous minority in Republican ranks that attempted to use the lawmaking power to promote selfish, sectional and personal interests.

For many months this unscrupulous coalition embroiled Congress in controversies that worked injury to the public. An attempt was made to strike down American industry and labor under the pretense that agriculture could not otherwise obtain its rights. The welfare of all Americans was jeopardized by this wanton attack. Business recovery has been delayed by it, and hundreds of thousands of families are hungry because of it.

The Republican party, thanks to the House of Representatives and the skillful leadership of Senator Watson in the Senate, finally destroyed the coalition and passed the tariff bill, with the flexible provision in the form desired by President Hoover. The foundation of American prosperity is, therefore, solid, and the work of recovery can now go on without further interference.

Americans are guaranteed possession of their own market. The greatest consuming market in the world belongs to them. Upon that asset they can proceed to conquer foreign markets by producing better goods by cheaper mass production methods than any competitors can command. Foreign tariffs are higher than the new American tariff, but superior American goods can and do surmount those tariffs.

Foreign nations can continue to sell enormous quantities of goods to the United States. This is their best market. But they can not send here cheap-labor goods to destroy American industries.

There is a world-wide depression, which is presumed to be an aftermath of the cremation of lives and wealth during the late war. The United States is feeling this depression in decreased exports, but only to a mild degree. Within the United States recovery from the stock market crash would have been accomplished by this time if the would-be wreckers of prosperity had not delayed enactment of the protective tariff law.

The first country that will recover from the world-wide depression is the United States. It has no war losses to be wiped out by extreme toil on starvation rations. Its industries are not kept going by robbing workers of rightful wages.

Twenty billions of American dollars are at work in foreign countries, helping to restore world prosperity. When American manufacturers establish branches in foreign countries and pay high wages they contribute powerfully to world welfare. When they attempt to exploit foreign workers in order to send cheap-labor goods back to the United States they are stopped at the customhouse.

Americans, applying their energy and intelligence to immense domestic resources and drawing upon the world for raw materials, produce an annual income of about $90,000,000,000. They can do much better than this, and are in the act of doing so. This country is the world's greatest powerhouse and reservoir of wealth. It is sending strength to all countries and is bolstering up the entire world. Nothing but another world war can prevent the restoration of prosperity to the nations.

The bedrock upon which American welfare rests is political independence and protection of domestic industry. Independence has been preserved in spite of deluded attempts to merge the United States with other nations in fantastic leagues and political entanglements. Protection has been preserved in spite of deluded partisanship and party treachery.

The way is now open for the United States to forge ahead under the constructive administration of a President whose instinct is to build up and not tear down.

STUDY OF DISTRICT FINANCES.

Approval of a $9,500,000 Federal contribution to the District budget may be regarded as a distinct Senate victory, but it does not resolve the fiscal relationship problem that was created when, six years ago, at the insistence of the House, Congress nullified substantive law by abandoning the proportionate method of making contributions in favor of the lump sum. The law specifies that the expenses of operating the District shall be shared between the local and Federal Governments on a 60-40 basis.

Six years ago, $9,000,000 was not much less than 40 per cent of the total budget. Today, $9,500,000 represents little more than 20 per cent of the total budget.

The compromise reached in the closing hours of the session brings no relief to local taxpayers. But it is significant in that it marks the breakdown of the $9,000,000 tradition, and asserts the Senate's right to equal participation with the House in formulating the District's fiscal policies. Members of the House had boasted repeatedly that the $9,000,000 lump sum would be the price exacted for the enactment of the bill. The defeat the House suffered should make it less inclined to attempt a dictatorship over the District of Columbia.

In the closing hours of the session the House approved a resolution setting up a select committee of seven members of the House to make an exhaustive study of fiscal relationship and District taxation. The House has proved itself to be entirely out of sympathy with District requirements, and there is reason to presume that the select committee will be a hand-picked body, set up for the purpose of "proving" that $9,000,000 is an equitable, if not an overly-generous, Federal contribution. If the House had been anxious to make an impartial inquiry it would have proposed that the Senate join in creating a committee. The House committee's report will probably have little influence upon future legislation.

Meanwhile, the District is assured of ample funds for the new fiscal year. Needed improvements can be carried forward; salary increases previously authorized will be put into effect and the comprehensive plan for long-time development will proceed. The District, however, will be operating principally on taxpayers' funds. The Government continues to shirk its responsibility. The fight for fiscal equity and justice should not be relaxed, but should be carried forward with renewed vigor until Congress recognizes the obligation of the Government to deal fairly with the District of Columbia.

NO EXPORT COLLAPSE.

The decline in American exports is not nearly so serious as the figures generally quoted indicate. Interests that are anxious to make the most of the current business recession are inclined to see only the 20 per cent decline over the record-breaking year of 1929. But an analysis by the Department of Commerce shows that exports for the first quarter of this year are only about 4 per cent below the average for similar periods of all the years from 1924 to 1928. Viewed from this background the foreign trade situation presents a much brighter picture than that which is usually presented to the public.

"This decrease in the volume of and dollar value of American exports," the department report says, "is a reflection of the world-wide business recession and the fall of commodity prices, with the consequent lowering of purchasing power of our foreign markets." The cause of the decline can be read in the detailed figures. The foreign automobile market suffered severely, but the foreign sales of agricultural machinery and electrical apparatus showed remarkable gains. Foreign countries have been forced to curtail their consumption of luxuries, but the demand for productive implements, &c., continues strong.

When business throughout the world slackens its pace international trade is certain to be curtailed. In view of conditions in many foreign markets it must be considered a notable accomplishment to keep the export trade so near the average level for the last six years. Only slight gains are necessary to equal the country's annual average.

NEWSPRINT PAPER.

Because the United States is dependent upon Canada for supplies of the paper technically known as newsprint, upon which newspapers are printed, more than ordinary interest attaches to the investigation recently completed by the Federal Trade Commission as to whether or not the Newsprint Institute of Canada is a monopolistic body. The commission found that the institute was not violating the antitrust laws of the United States, but it recommended that the future activities of the institute be vigilantly observed "with a view to remedial action" should any effort be made to operate as a combination in restraint of trade. The commission also recommended that the Government continue its experiments in the manufacture of paper from farm waste products and that the Government-owned timber lands and waterpower sites in Alaska be made available for the development of a paper industry in that Territory, "bearing in mind the conserving and perpetuating of these national resources."

Before the World War the United States was largely independent so far as its supply of newsprint was concerned. In 1919 the total output of newsprint in the United States and Canada was 2,178,000 tons, of which Canada produced 803,000 tons, or 37 per cent, while the United States produced 1,375,000 tons, or 63 per cent. In 1929, however, the total requirement was 4,121,000 tons, of which the United States produced only 1,392,000 tons, or 34 per cent, while Canada produced 2,728,000 tons, or 63 per cent. Forty American mills operated in 1929 as against 38 Canadian mills.

The significant paragraphs of the Trade Commission's report are those that recommend the encouragement of a domestic newsprint industry. There is reason to hope that scientists of the Department of Agriculture, working in cooperation with the Bureau of Standards, will be able eventually to perfect methods for working waste agricultural materials into a satisfactory commercial newsprint. The timber resources of Alaska, together with an abundance of potential power, offer an opportunity for the development of a great newsprint industry.

TWO NEW JUSTICES.

Confirmation of the nominations of Joseph W. Cox and Oscar R. Luhring to be justices of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia insures speedy relief to the overworked court. Two more justices provided for have not yet been named.

Messrs. Cox and Luhring were honored by especially strong indorsements from the legal fraternity and the bench. Mr. Cox has been a resident of the District since 1898, and has had a varied practice, both private and as special assistant to the Attorney General in important Federal cases. Mr. Luhring has made an exceptionally fine record as Assistant Attorney General and is thoroughly familiar with his new duties. He is a most welcome addition to the roll of permanent residents of the District.

JAPAN'S GRANT MEMORIAL

Tokyo Special to Christian Science Monitor.

A stone memorial bench bearing an inscribed bronze table in commemoration of the visit of Gen. U. S. Grant to Japan in 1879 has been unveiled at Ueno Park in Tokyo. It is placed close to two tall trees, one of which was planted by former President Grant and the other by Mrs. Grant more than half a century ago. The memorial is the gift of Viscount Shibusawa and Baron Masuda, both members of the original welcoming committee.

The unveiling ceremonies were simple but impressive. Miss Jane McIlroy, young daughter of the American Military Attache and Mrs. McIlroy, drew the veil. Viscount Shibusawa delivered an address in Japanese which was tranlated into English, during the course of which he recounted the various activities participated in by Gen. Grant during the three months he was in the empire.

He was followed by Edwin L. Neville, the American Charge d'Affaires, who said that it was Gen. Grant's sincere desire "to see Japan realize all possible strength and greatness."

A representative of the minister of foreign affairs, Baron Shidehara, paid tribute to Gen. Grant's character and added:

"Gen Grant was interested in the peace of the Far East and was especially interested in the administration of the home and foreign affairs of Japan, and he gave many valuable suggestions and advice to our authorities. This is the reason our countrymen hold such a cordial respect for him.

"I consider that the international friendship between America and Japan had already begun at the restoration period. This feeling was greatly encouraged by the visit of President Grant to our fatherland, and the future of the mutual intercourse of the two nations has flourished as the two trees which President and Mrs. Grant planted in Ueno Park grow stronger year after year."

Gen Grant was the most distinguished foreigner to have visited Japan up to that time. He came to Japan on his world tour following the close of his two terms as President of the United States. Japan was then a young member of the modern family of nations, and was eagerly throwing off the feudalism of centuries in order to clothe itself with the costume of the nineteenth century.

That Gen. Grant was a friend of the empire and that he was only too glad to offer any help within his power in this movement was evident as soon as he had landed. To the Japanese he came as one who had held the highest office in one of the greatest nations of the modern world, and so his advice and criticism were listened to and respected without question. Upon the request of the Japanese he gave this advice freely, and there is little doubt but that he is to some extent responsible for the course which Japan has followed during the last half century.

Living "in the world" is only living on its periphery. Only those who by the invisible contacts with men through books and meditation know their wider circle and share their ideas really live in the world.

By the daily rise and fall of its tide, by its reciprocal currents of birth and death, the ocean of life keeps ever fresh.

Suddenly we become able to sit in judgment on ourselves.

DREAM FISHING.

A fishing trip I haven't had
In twenty years or more.
Yet now and then, a smiling lad
I pushed away from shore
To sit with rod in hand again
Where summer breezes blow
The self-same fish to land again
I caught so long ago.

Grim care has kept me prisoner here
And duty held me fast,
But still in rippling waters clear
At times a line I cast
Close to a reedy patch again
Where water-lilies grow
And happily I catch again
Those bass of long ago.

The reel I used is rusted o'er,
But still I hear it sing.
The boat in which I left the shore
Is yet a living thing
I kept the thrill and rapture of
Glad hours once mine to know
And oft repeat the capture of Those bass so long ago.

Yes, still a fisherman am I
Who dreams his way to sea
And knows, when'er his fancies fly
Just what his luck will be.
Though old in body, oft again
He stands, with eyes aglow
And proudly holds aloft again
His catch of long ago!

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

My Dear Louise:

I have heard you say that the prospect of teaching school after you finish college doesn't thrill you, and in the absence of further evidence I take it for granted that you haven't yet decided what you wish to do to earn your salt.

At seventeen you still have ample time to consider many possibilities; but you must reach a decision before one is forced on you by chance, and I wish to tell you a little fable that may help to point the right way.

Once upon a time, as all good fables should begin, a messenger from the gods appeared to men and told them of a mysterious mountain far away, across deserts and wild rivers and black forests, where they could find a spring whose waters would heal all human ills.

Of course the men at once organized a party to attempt the long journey and find the spring, and almost everybody who could get away set forth one morning full of high resolve and a great desire to be useful.

All went well for a day or two, and then things began to happen.

It developed that numbers of men had joined the party in the hope of getting rich along the way by selling trinkets to the heathen encountered, and these frequently held up the march while they bargained and traded.

Others were intent on being leaders, though they had no idea which way to go, and these quarreled among themselves while the caravan stood still.

Still others broke down on the way, or strayed and were lost, or followed paths that led nowhere and had to be brought back, until at last everybody forgot the purpose of the journey and each man thought only of himself, as he had done at home, so that further travel was abandoned and the miraculous spring never was found.

Well, the history of the human race shows it has been journeying a long time in quest of perfection.

It began in the jungle, naked and ignorant and brutal, and Destiny led it through many trials and sufferings to its present half-way station.

Whatever the hidden purpose behind all things, it seems clear enough that the duty and high calling and great adventure of man is to struggle on, doing his utmost to overcome ignorance and superstition and selfishness and greed, until the race at last is civilized.

There are ten thousand things to distract and interrupt and delay him, and the stupid hinder the journey because they don't know what it's all about; but those who understand keep pegging away and each generation sees a little more progress.

You, my dear, must be a help or a hindrance—a good scout sharing the great adventure, or a drag to hold it back.

Lead, if you can, but in any case join the caravan if only to curry the camels. Love, DAD.

"HEAT PROSTRATION."

(The scene is a city hospital on one of those hot days on which the newspapers make a first page feature of the heat and its so-called victims. A patient with a broken leg is being carried in.)

Admission Clerk—What's the case?

Ambulance Man—Joseph Krautz, 36, white, 176 Widgett street, heat prostration . . .

Patient (mildly surprised)—Lissen, there's some mistake. I got a broken leg.

Ambulance Man (severely)—Keep still. You're a heat wave victim.

Patient (considerably annoyed)—I tell you I'm not a heat case. I broke a leg and . . .

Ambulance Man—That's all right about breaking a leg, but you're a heat case just the same.

Patient (appealing to the admission clerk)—I didn't even know it was hot, lady. I fell off a——

Admission Clerk—You'd better be a heat case and stop arguing.

Ambulance Man—That's what I say.

Patient—But how can I be a heat case? I work in an icehouse.

Admission Clerk—That does complicate matters, doesn't it?

Ambulance Man—Not to me. I tell you he's a heat case and that settles it.

Patient—Don't be ridiculous. I was working in the ice-house and was never cooler in my life, when I slipped to the floor and busted this leg here, and——

Ambulance Man (with an air of superiority)—Well, what melted the ice and made the floor slippery? The heat, didn't it? You're a heat case and you might as well admit it.

Patient (in exasperation)—I tell you I'm not a heat case.

Ambulance Man—You gotta be a heat case.

Patient—Why?

Ambulance Man—It's the rule.

Patient—A hospital rule?

Ambulance Man—Well, it's a sort of agreement between all hospitals and the newspapers in real hot weather. Anybody that collapses has to get into the newspapers as a heat prostration.

Patient (dramatically)—Once for all, I tell you I'm a broken leg case.

Ambulance Man—Now get this straight: You'll be a heat case or you'll get out of this hospital.

Admission Clerk—Why don't you be nice and be a heat case like all those other men over there?

Patient (looking at a group on cots)—What happened to you fellers?

Second Patient—I was hit by a fire truck.

Third Patient—The wife hit me with a mop handle.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Bancroft's Memorial Oration to Lincoln Recalled by One Who Was Present—Supreme Court "Roasted."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reading in The Post an extract from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, giving an account of the removal of the papers in the Dred Scott case, recalls to my memory a scene I witnessed during the session of Congress in 1866. The occasion was the delivery of an oration over the late President Lincoln by George Bancroft, the historian, and one time Secretary of the Navy.

It was a very solemn occasion. The two houses met in the hall of the House of Representatives, Speaker Colfax presiding. At his side was Ben Wade, president pro tem of the Senate. On the left of the Speaker President Johnson and his cabinet were seated, while the members of the Supreme Court occupied seats on the right. Among the justices present, four of them, Wayne, Grier, Clifford and Nelson, had been members of the court at the time the Dred Scott case was argued, and had joined in the opinion rendered by Chief Justice Taney. I was doing the "O yez" stunt for the court, and went in with the justices.

Criticism of the Dred Scott decision formed a good part of the oration, the orator being especially caustic in his condemnation. Bancroft had a thin, squeaky kind of voice, and he seemed to spit out his words, looking at the justices as he did so. According to his views, the decison was an unpardonable crime, and those who joined in it criminals of the most degraded degree.

As the court was returning to its room I heard Justice Wayne say to Justice Grier: "We may have been wrong in that decision, but surely this was not the proper place and time to tell us so." Justice Grier responded: "Antony, you remember, said, 'I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him.' Bancroft evidently came to abuse us instead of coming to bury Lincoln."

Few of the papers of that day bestowed any praises on the oration. On the contrary, they criticized it in the strongest terms.

Taxpayer Registers Protest Against House Committee That Is to Investigate District Affairs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a taxpayer of this District I protest against an inquiry into fiscal affairs by a lopsided committee appointed by only one branch of Congress. Its report and recommendations will be worthless, even if they are not soaked with prejudice. The Senate will be predisposed to reject any recommendations from such a committee, while the House dictatorship will make sure that the committee turns in a report supporting the idea that the Federal Government is too liberal when it doles out $9,000,000 toward the $45,000,000 required for the government of this District.

The House investigating committee will merely add to the confusion in Congress. Taxpayers should be on guard against accepting this committee as representing Congress. It does not. It represents a clique of the House. A. T. B.

Suggests Prizes for Most Beautiful Houses, Gardens and Communities in District-wide Contests.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington has been slow to appreciate municipal beauty, but it is now becoming alive to its value. The Board of Trade medals for especially meritorious buildings and grounds furnish evidence of the new spirit. I suggest that the civic bodies combine and raise a substantial fund from which awards can be made in District-wide contests. Let the home-maker have a chance to win $500 or $1,000 for the most beautiful house, the most artistic garden, the most attractive approaches, &c. Let communities organize and compete for money prizes that can be devoted to further embellishment of the winning community.

Says Claudius Huston Has Only Been Waiting for Congress to Adjourn.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that Congress has adjourned and can't raise a fog, I predict that Claudius Huston, will with leisurely dignity, find it inconvenient to serve longer as chairman of the Republican national committee. He intended to retire all along, but he wouldn't go out accompanied by the hoots and howls of Democrats in Congress. Now that they have lost their megaphone, Claudius will proceed with his plan to promote the welfare of the Republican machine by withdrawing as chief mechanician.

PLEASING THE LADIES.

There is no telling about ladies when they are disturbed, or ruffled, states the New Yorker. One of the things ladies demand, when something goes wrong with their shopping, is that the store discharge the employe whose fault it was.

A store uptown has learned how very mollifying it is to ladies to witness a dismissal, and they have assigned one of their employes to be the goat in all cases. It is his job to be discharged. Whenever an aggrieved patron of the store demands the scalp of an employe, this young man is summoned, the blame is at once traced to his negligence, he is given a severe talking to and told to get his hat and leave.

Sometimes he is fired as many as 20 times in a week, always to the immense relief of the customer and never with any particular injury to himself. In fact, he rather likes it—gives him time to go across the street for a soda.

Mrs. Meyer Aiding Opera In Suburbs

Capital Woman Active in Bringing Metropolitan to Westchester.

By JEAN ELIOT.

"OPERA for the suburbs!" is New York's latest slogan. And a Washington woman, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, jr., is one of those cooperating with Mr. Otto H. Kahn, chairman of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera Company, in bringing the ambitious plan into being. Mrs. Meyer is chairman of the Westchester County Recreation Commission and was one of the moving spirits in building the great Westchester recreation center in White Plains, N. Y., at which the Metropolitan will present two operas next December as an experiment in a program which contemplates regular opera seasons in New York's suburbs.

Since the bulk of New Yorkers now live out of New York, Mr. Kahn feels that the time has come to begin taking opera to the people. Art can not be properly appreciated unless it is readily accessible. And since the necessity for suburban residents to return to their homes from work in the city, dine, dress and return to town makes it difficult for Mohammet to go to the mountain the mountain is now about to be brought to Mohammet.

Full Metropolitan casts and equipment will be used for the Westchester presentations. If the response of the community to the trial performances is favorable, a regular Westchester season will be established during the winter of 1931-32. And seasons in other communities equipped for similar presentations may follow, bringing a revolution in the tradition of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Regular tours have never been made by the Metropolitan because of difficulty in obtaining houses suitable for productions of such magnitude. But if a sufficient number of suitable houses can be found in the vicinity of New York, a regular suburban season may supplement the Metropolitan's visits to such cities as Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Baltimore and Washington.

That the Metropolitan will play a return engagement in Washington next winter seems reasonably assured. Although the brief season at the Fox Theater last winter could not be described as profitable, the deficit incurred was so small as not to pinch the guarantors perceptibly and presumably the Washington Opera Association will again bring the Metropolitan aggregation to us.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer left Washington rather earlier than usual this year in order that their house, formerly the home of the late Mr. Henry White, might be turned over to Uncle Sam for entertainment of Dr. Julio Prestes, President-elect of Brazil, while he was the guest of the Nation. Since then they have been at their country home at Mount Kisco, in Westchester County, N. Y. Mr. Kahn attended the opening of the $1,000,000 Westchester Recreation Center, which Mrs. Meyer helped to build and to finance, held in May, and was so impressed with its possibilities as to be inspired to bring opera to the suburbs.

Chicago was a pioneer in the field of presenting opera in its environs, the summer season of the Chicago Civic Opera Company at Ravenia Park being a well established and highly successful feature of its annual program. There, of course, opera is presented in the open in a sylvan setting unequalled anywhere except perhaps at the famous Hollywood Bowl.

THE GIRL IN THE AIR - - -

BY JULIE ANNE MOORE

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Janet Decker—Eighteen, with closely cropped head of burnt gold and a pair of very large and quizzical eyes. The flying secretary for

Robert C. Tolbert, president of the Great Eastern Air Transportation Co., and the father of Dick Tolbert, a young official of Great Eastern, and who has told Janet he loves her and intends to marry her, even though he is at present engaged to Helen Morgan, a society girl, who has recently sailed for Europe with her mother, but who has just cabled that she is returning immediately.

Hugh Temple, pilot for Great Eastern and secretly in love with Janet. He has been captured, along with a huge shipment of money he was transporting by plane to a New York bank, and has but recently escaped. Only Janet knows of his escape, however, as he is in hiding, hoping to work up a case against the criminals and to discover the real leader of the gang.

Henry Frenda, a clerk in the office of Great Eastern, and a friend of Janet's. He had lent her a book on aviation, which had been entrusted to him for delivery to a Mr. Creil, wealthy boarder at the Frenda home, by Belter.

Belter, office manager for Great Eastern, who had been suspected of supplying information to a group of criminals pertaining to the movement of planes carrying large money shipments. Belter is found murdered one night.

Miss Sears, Dick Tolbert's secretary.

Fred Turner, an automobile mechanic, who has been soft on Janet, and who offered her an engagement ring, which she refused.

Margaret Decker, Janet's younger sister.

At the police investigation, the detective charges Janet with having been Henry's lover, and accuses her of having "gotten thick" with Belter. He then builds up his case by saying that he thinks Henry found Janet and Belter together and, in a rage, committed the murder. Janet is furious, and declines to answer any more questions. The detective says he is going to put Henry where he can be gotten at any time.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXI.

The week following Belter's murder was filled with unpleasant and discouraging experiences. Henry Frenda was in jail, held as a material witness, but likely to be charged with the crime any day. Janet had gone to see his mother and found her on the verge of insanity as a result of her son's arrest. Hugh, who had failed to appear at the field the day after their meeting, as she had thought he would, had sent her a little note saying that he had gone directly to Tolbert's home and with Tolbert's approval had decided to keep under cover for a few more days. And—to add to the burden of difficulties already near unbearable—Dick had called only this morning to say that Helen would arrive at New York tomorrow.

Walking the living room floor, Janet went over the events of the past weeks again and again, trying to extract from the chaos one rational idea. Dick . . . Tolbert . . . Belter . . . Hugh . . . Henry Frenda . . . Miss Sears . . . all but one unknown to her a month before, and now all definite factors in the whirlpool of action that has swept her from her feet and carried her far, far beyond her depth.

Everything now seemed to center around Belter's murder. And yet Janet could not get away from a suspicion that the police had made no direct effort to discover the murderer. She did not for one moment consider the possibility that Henry could have committed the deed; moreover, she refused to believe that the police had arrested Henry with any hope of proving him guilty. It was like a complicated game, a great pretense, playing one thing against another on chance. Henry had admitted a quarrel with Belter. He had been the last person, so far as he knew, to see Belter alive. And he had refused to explain his whereabouts between the time he admitted leaving Belter and his return home several hours later. A motive, and no alibi . . . so he had been put in jail. Strange justice, Janet thought.

The detective's absurd attempt to construct a case about an imaginary love affair between Janet and Henry was one of the most perplexing of the many problems that had kept her in a nervous fever during the past week. He had been so definite, so sure, so angry that she had denied it. Had Henry said something to suggest an affair between them? But that was hardly likely; Henry would not go out of his way to involve Janet, even indirectly; particularly when he could only strengthen the case against him by so doing. And yet Janet was satisfied that the detective had based his theory of an interrupted romance upon something more substantial than a wild idea of his own.

Halting by the couch, Janet sat down and pressed her head with her hands. How much better off she would have been, had she stayed in the employment office. Life had been a pretty flat affair under the sharp eye of Miss Miller, but at least she had known what it was all about. But from the very first day she had gone to work for Tolbert she had been in a daze. How long would it keep up? Could she go through much more of this and remain sane? Was life to be like this always; or was she passing through a necessary transition that was to lead to something worth while?

Only her love for Dick supported her, held her to the job from which she wanted with all her being to run away. And even as she thought of him and longed to have him near her, the telephone rang and Dick himself was saying:

"It's after nine, darling, and I ought to be ashamed of myself; but can't I see you for just a few minutes? We'll ride around the block, or——"

"You're the answer to a lonely maiden's prayer, Dick," she told him eagerly. "Mud and Dad are at the pictures and Margaret's heaven knows where. I'm all alone and dying of it. Don't pay any attention to the red lights."

When, ages and ages later, the doorbell rang and Dick stalked in, Janet pointed to the clock on the piano. "I've counted the seconds since you called and I've decided you don't love me. Did you walk?"

Dick drew her to him, laughing softly and kissed her once, twice, three times . . . "One for every second," he said; but she slipped out of his arms and led him to the couch.

"And still," she said, "you haven't told me you love me, and I never needed to be loved so much before. . . . Do you know what I've been doing since the folks went out? . . . Walking the floor, thinking, thinking, thinking. If I think much more, Dick, I'll go raving mad." She drew her feet up under her and settled back against his arm. "I mean it," she declared. "I'm so fed up with the whole mess until I'm almost angry with Belter for having let himself be murdered."

"You poor kid!" Dick said sympathetically. "You've certainly had a rough time of it since you left the employment bureau, haven't you? . . . But after all none of us knew what was coming. . . . By the way, I've big news for you—Temple's back."

Janet wanted to pretend surprise, but she didn't feel equal to the effort. "I know . . ." she said quietly; "I saw him."

"You did? That's funny. I didn't know any one had seen him; that is, outside our house. Did he come here?"

"Just to the door," Janet said vaguely, wondering why she felt obligated to conceal the truth from him. "I've expected him back at the field every day since."

"He's going out tomorrow morning. He ought to have gone out a week ago, it seems to me; but he and Dad have been painfully mysterious about something; said no one was to know he was back. . . . Pardon me if I make too much of it, Janet, but I don't understand why he came here. Are you one of the arch conspirators, too?"

His tone was light, facetious, but Janet sensed the suggestion of antagonism behind it. Hugh might be his best friend, but, inexplicably, he was displeased to know that Hugh had revealed himself to Janet. Or perhaps he resented Janet's failure to mention their meeting.

Janet said: "Don't you think he owed it to me? . . . After that night in New York. I suppose he wanted me to know that he was still alive."

Dick, somewhat reassured, spoke as if a casual curiosity had been amply satisfied. "Hugh'll bear watching. I haven't forgotten the extravagant compliments he paid you after his first interview with you."

"Hmm! . . . So you admit they were extravagant compliments. At least you aren't being very complimentary."

Dick caught her to him fiercely. "I love you too much to feed your vanity," he whispered, pressing his lips to her temple. . . . "I do love you, Janet . . . more than you can ever know."

"I wonder . . . Are you very, very sure of it, Dick? Think how terrible it would be to discover that you didn't love me at all after—after it's too late . . . It frightens me to think about it."

"You little idiot, you. Why do you talk so? Do you realize what tomorrow means?" . . .

Janet shut her eyes as if she could evade the question by so simple a guesture. Tomorrow Helen came home. She knew that. The thought had been haunting her all day. But nothing was to be gained by discussing it. She waited, hoping that Dick would see that she preferred not to speak of Helen.

But Dick saw nothing beyond the unpleasent task he had set himself. "I've made up my mind to get it over with as quickly as possible, Janet. In the first place, I shall neglect to kiss her when we meet. She will be incensed by that and by the time we're home, there'll be a scene. At the height of it I shall tell her calmly that I fear we made a mistake and that I am interpreting her attitude as a subtle request that the engagement be broken . . . Then I'll walk out of the house. . . ."

Janet said thoughtfully: "I've an idea it won't be as easy as that, Dick. Helen's not your little, demure shop girl, you know . . . Heaven knows I'll feel better when it's over . . . Why is it, Dick, that the things we really want are so hard to get?"

But Dick was not to be drawn into a philosophic discussion when there was something more tangible to deal with. As if Janet had not spoken, he continued: "And then, Janet . . ."—he put a finger under her chin and made her look at him—"and then my heart, there will be but one word in the language for me, W-h-e-n . . .? Will it be soon, Janet?"

Janet smiled up at him adoringly. "I'll be afraid to put it off very long, Dick . . . afraid some one will take you away from me."

For more than an hour after Dick had gone Janet lay huddled up on the couch, thinking . . . yearning . . . crying a little.

And then Margaret had come in, Margaret the vivacious, exuberant and happy, and visibly relieved to find that she had not a family council awaiting her return.

"Jan, honey; you've been crying! . . . Who's bothered you, sis?"

Janet sat up and indulged in an exaggerated yawn. "I've been sleeping, you mean . . . Where've you been, Marge?"

Margaret said vaguely: "Out . . . Folks back yet?"

"Not yet; but you didn't answer my question. You've been out where?"

"Oh, out riding. And it's such a lovely night, Jan. It's a full moon and you can see for miles and miles around . . . It's almost as bright as day."

Margaret jumped up abruptly and went to hang up her things.

Janet studied her face as she came back to the center table and toyed with the magazines scattered over the surface. "Marge," she said at last; you're holding out on me. You don't mean to tell me it's none of my business where you've been or what you've been doing . . . ?"

"Oh, Jan . . ." Margaret dropped on her knees by the couch and laid her head in Janet's lap. "Of course it's your business . . . if you want to know——"

"You've never kept anything from me before, Marge. I know you haven't done anything wrong, and even if you had, I couldn't understand your hiding it from me. . . . Don't tell me you've—fallen in love, Marge." . . .

Margaret was silent, but her little head shook ever so little.

"No, no, Marge . . . Not yet, darling. Why, you're——" She stopped short, knowing that all the talk in the world could not alter facts. "But even if you have, Marge, you shouldn't be slipping out to meet him. You know that isn't right. . . . Does Mud know about it?"

"No—nobody knows. I—I didn't know it m-myself until tonight." Margaret was sobbing now and Janet slipped down to the floor beside her and put her arms about her.

"You mustn't cry, baby," she whispered. "You're much too young to be even thinking about boys; but if you are—why, there's nothing to do about it. Only you mustn't be too serious about it, darling. You'll think you're in love lots and lots of times before you really are, you know."

"No, I won't," Margaret protested through her tears. "I never will again as—as long as I live, Jan. You don't know how I feel." . . .

"Don't I?" Janet countered. "I wonder, Marge. Every girl goes through the same experience, darling. A boy comes along and says a lot of nice things about you and maybe asks you for a kiss and bang!—it's done. You think you're licked every time it happens. And then another boy shows up with a smoother line, and you start all over again. . . . Who's the first Romeo you've bowled over, Marge? Do I know him?"

"Oh, I knew you'd ask me, Jan," Margaret cried hopelessly. "And you'll never, never fogive me. . . . I wish I'd—I'd died when I was a baby!"

Janet hugged the child to her, laughing. "You little clown, you. . . . Quit crying and we'll forget about it. He's probably off telling the same stuff to some other girl by now, anyway."

"You mustn't talk like that," Margaret pleaded. "He said he loved me and nobody else, and I know he meant it. You know he wouldn't lie, Jan. He's not that kind."

"I don't know anything about it," Janet said softly. "I'd have to see him first and size him up. You bring him to the house next time he wants to see you and I'll tell you what I think."

Without apparent reason Margaret now began to cry as if her little heart would break. "I ca-can't bring him t-to the house," she sobbed. "You'll h-hate me if I d-do."

"You little jack-leg; I wont hate you. Why in the world do you say that, Marge? Don't you know I love you more than all the men under God's blue heaven, Marge"

"B-but you d-don't know who it is."

"Of course I don't, but I will after you introduce us, won't I? Can't you even tell me his name, baby?"

Margaret's soft little body shook convulsively. "It's F-Fred T-T-Turner," she sobbed, and grew suddenly quiet as if expecting the house to fall down about her ears.

The sound of steps on the walk warned them that Mr. and Mrs. Decker were returning from the movies. Without a word, Janet got up, lifted Margaret in her arms and took her to her room.

Behind the Screens

—With NELSON B. BELL—

MR. GRIFFITH'S setting of that triumphant double-header, to begin slightly ahead of my holiday breakfast hour, made it possible for me to discover that the best place to spend Fourth of July afternoon is in your own back yard.

It was fun checking up on the spring planting.

While the tulips, the forsythia, the iris, the lilies of the valley and the eight different kinds of climbing roses have done their stuff and are through for the season, there are still several other kinds of garden roses that are carrying on in valiant fashion and keeping the vases filled with fragrant blooms. The phlox, Shasta daisies, lemon lilies, nasturtiums, a sickly, pale blue sort of lily that is not so hot, coreopsis and marigolds are all in bloom, and even the zinnias are beating the gun and breaking out in occasional sporadic blossoms slightly ahead of their time. The hollyhocks have marshaled an imperious and multicolored phalanx that stretches the length of the back fence—which isn't so far as you might think, what with the garage and all.

A little later will come the August lily, which gives every early promise of blooming its blooming head off, the boltonia, the perennial aster, the golden glow, the chrysanthemums, the gaillardia and others of the late summer and early fall blossomers.

And the mint bed is doing all right, too, thanks—for roast lamb and ice tea only, you understand!

But the birds were even more interesting than the blossoms.

The pigeons that wing their way over from the Decatur street car barns for a litle easy picking, the blue jays, grackles, blackbirds, sparrows, starlings and others of the rabble, are glad to eat right off the ground, but the more artistocratic of the feathered choir are a little more finicky. The cardinals, mocking birds, song thrushes and the like have to have their seed of various sorts on shelves stuck up well out of reach on the grape arbor.

The robins and the catbirds don't seem to care much for the chow the Bells provide, but seem to do pretty well with the bugs and worms about the place, at that. The blackbird is the smartest gourmand of the lot. He grabs the biggest crust he can find, hops over to the bird bath with it, softens it in the water, holds it down with the talons of one foot, like a dog with a bone, and has himself a leisurely and ample banquet.

Of the whole gang, the catbird seems to be the only one that knows how to take a bath. The robin appears to be merely a timid wader and the others no better than perfunctory bathers, but Mr. Catbird, when he gets around to his ablutions, takes himself a regular, honest to goodness bath, going right out where the water is deepest—2½ inches—and then ducking, flapping, shimmying and shaking until he has made a mess of the whole place and hogged the pool plenty! But he comes clean, believe me.

While I was stretched out on the grass taking a sun bath while watching the birds take theirs in water, I had a fine opportunity, too, to observe how laboreth the busy little bee to improve each shining hour. If you think a bee doesn't put the old vacuum cleaner to work on every clover blossom upon which he alights, you are just plain crazy.

It reminded me of the way The Post staff goes through me for movie passes!

But to get back to business, it might be well at this time to acknowledge a stunning autographed photo of Esther Ralston, received a day or two ago to take its place beside Armida's and many others that I prize highly.

Speaking again of Armida, it might surprise you to know that she was born on the north side of the Rio Grande and speaks English without a trace of accent—better than she speaks Spanish, as a matter of fact. Her father was an American, her mother Mexican, and she was educated entirely in United States schools.

Will Osborne and his band, popular radio entertainers and a hit stage act, will reappear at the Earle next Friday. Osborne created no less than a sensation with his crooning during his recent visit to the Thirteenth street house, and a return booking was popularly demanded. His wire to the management confirming the new date was as follows:

"Will arrive Friday, July 11, with band (Stop) Glad to see Washington again (Stop) Lots of new songs."

The screen feature for that week bids fair to complete a snappy bill—it is "Sweet Mama," starring Alice White.

At the RKO-Keith Theater this week, Washington is privileged to view the world premiere of Richard Dix's latest Radio production, "Shootin' Straight"—or maybe the "g" is on there, I wouldn't be sure—a special print having been rushed here from the Coast for first showing on any public screen.

Incidentally, installation of the refrigeration plant has been completed. The cooling mechanism was given its baptism Thursday night and when a few minor adjustments have been made will be operated continuously from now on.

By the way, Spyros Skouras, director of theaters for the Warner Brothers; Lewis Warner, son of Harry M. Warner, president of the company; Jules Catsiss, purchasing agent, and Frank Cahill, of the sound department, were Washington visitors this midweek on a tour of inspection of the local Warner properties, which they found in tip-top shape under the supervisory control of John J. Payette, general manager.

Charles Kurtzman, personal representative of Harry Arthur, in charge of all Fox theaters, also has been a visitor for the past week or ten days, camping in the office of Hardie Meakin, managing director of the local cathedral. Mr. Kurtzman's duties consist, unless I am being kidded, of touring the Fox de luxe houses and installing systems and inaugurating methods prescribed by his boss.

Yes, those ladder ads that some of you made inquiry about are his.

Let's see, the next one is Labor Day, isn't it?

Holiday Crowd Views War Veterans' Carnival

A holiday crowd of more than 3,000 persons last night attended the carnival of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Thirty-fourth street and Wisconsin avenue northwest. The carnival will be continued through July 12. Proceeds will go to the organization's relief work and its Overseas Band and Drum and Bugle Corps.

In three tents on the carnival grounds are a Hawaiian village, athletic show and side show freaks. The other attractions include a ferris wheel, merry-go-round, Venetian swings and novelty games. Concerts are given nightly by the band and drum and bugle corps.

Youth De Priest Named Admitted to West Point

On recognition of the merits in his certificate of preparatory education, Deton J. Brooks, of Chicago, at the instance of Representative Oscar DePriest, has been admitted to West Point, it was learned yesterday. He was one of three colored youths nominated by the Illinois Representative, the others having declined to enter.

The name of Brooks was submitted too late for participation in the entrance examinations, but his admission is understood at this time to depend on a physical examination. One of the youths who declined the nomination was Benjamin O. Davis, jr., son of Col. Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking colored officer in the United States Army.

CANON IS SPENDING JUBILEE IN HAWAII

Librarian Fletcher of Cathedral Has Had Notable Career in Washington.

BELOVED BY CHILDREN

By DAVID RANKIN BARBEE.

Canon Joseph Fletcher, the librarian of Washington Cathedral, is celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood with a two-month vacation in Hawaii. With his wife he is now journeying westward and soon he will be on the mighty Pacific, breasting the waves for Honolulu. There they will be the guests of their relatives, Bishop and Mrs. S. Harrington Littell.

A very remarkable old man is Canon Fletcher. Children love him so they call him "Daddy" Fletcher, and for one who is a scholar and a lover of the arts this is no small or narrow tribute. All the successes of his long life and unusual ministry have been built upon youth, so it is no wonder that he has kept his mind young and growing and that his sympathies have blessed children until they give him the love that the childless old man was denied from little ones in his own household.

Most of his long life has been spent in the shadow of the dome of the National Capitol. He might have had large churches and high honors in his dear Episcopal denomination, but he chose rather to work with churches that were small, some of them so small they had closed their doors, and in reopening those doors and in keeping them open he has done his most enduring work. This has required toilsome labors, but he has never complained, and with all his labors and the distractions that come from such a ministry he has found time to equip himself in scholarship until he is an authority on theology, on the Pauline letters and on church architecture as well as on literature.

Of New England Parentage.

What manner of man is this "Daddy" Fletcher? He was born in New York of New England parentage, but came as a child to Maryland and has lived nearly 60 years in that State and in the District of Columbia. His father was the eighth in line from the original English ancestor who joined the Pilgrim Fathers in Plymouth colony. You would never guess that this was his ancestral background from talking with him.

And this is one of the glories of Southern civilization. Transplant a Yankee down South and he soon learns to talk through his mouth, and his voice becomes soft and gentle, and in every way he is of the South very Southern.

It was so with Sergt. S. Prentiss, of Maine, the famous Mississippi orator; it was so of Gov. James H. Hammond, of South Carolina, whose father was a Connecticut schoolmaster; it was so of Jeremiah George Harris, of Maine, the friend of Andrew Jackson, whom Old Hickory brought South to edit a newspaper that made great history, and it was so of John M. Berrien, of Georgia, a Massachusetts man, who became more thoroughly Georgian than any man ever born in that State. The list could be strung out until it became as long as Jordan's rocky road, but these distinguished illustrations will bear witness to the truth of the statement.

It may be that Canon Fletcher's education had much to do with his conversion from a Northern to a Southern man. Sometimes it does happen so. He was among the early graduates of the Maryland College of Agriculture, and while there he felt the divine call to preach and began the study of Greek and Hebrew under the Rev. Dr. Lewin.

Studies at Alexandria.

Thence to the famous Virginia Theological Seminary at Alexandria, where he came in touch with a faculty and a student body composed of Virginians and other men of the South. Mixed in with his theology he must have heard a lot of politics, for the South was just then completing the work of overthrowing radicalism and taking up the burdens of her own government.

This writing shall not follow in detail the ministerial career of Canon Fletcher. His first call was to the diaconate of the Church of the Epiphany, then under the brilliant ministry of Dr. William Paret, who afterwards became the Bishop of Maryland. He was the last candidate admitted to holy orders by Bishop William R. Whittingham, and he was ordained to the priesthood in 1882 by Bishop Pinkney. Thus three men of singular ability touched his life at a formative period.

Let us glance at two of his early labors. A call came to him to be assistant to the Rev. Dr. James Buck, rector of St. Paul's, Rock Creek, but on the advice of Bishop Paret he declined it and accepted a call to the Church of the Atonement, Tenafly, N. J. When he reached his parish he found the church doors closed, the building in a dilapidated condition and the parish scattered and low spirited.

Beautiful Church Built.

Soon his enthusiasm animated his parish, the people came together, and under his leadership they remodeled the church, rebuilt most of it and so beautified it that it was a matter of note. This was the work of a year, this and his marriage to Miss Henriette Moffett, scion of an old and eminent French family resident in Washington. Pretty soon he was building a handsome rectory for his bride, and together they labored for six years, seeing the parish grow and burgeon under their kindly Christian ministrations.

Nothing more natural than for him to surrender this pleasant place and accept a call to mission work at Sparrow's Point on the Eastern Shore of Maryland among laboring people who had been drawn there by the building of the steel mills and shipyards. There was no church and no congregation, but the young missioner set about getting both. Some of the more evangelical of the Protestant denominations think that such an enterprise is not a part of the economy of the Episcopal Church, but they reason without the facts.

"No mission in the Far West demanded more sacrifice and enthusiasm," says one who knows the intimate details of this event in Canon Fletcher's life. "He went around collecting funds, he mixed mortar and carried bricks, he handled the shovel and trowel, and with the sweat of his brow he helped to build the walls. With his own hands he carved the furniture, and after three years of hard work and uncessing toil he built both a beautiful church and rectory." Then the Bishop of Maryland showered his blessings and benedictions on the minister and his ministry of labor.

Studied Architecture Abroad.

His whole life is filled with such labors, with similar incidents. If the diocese of Maryland needed a girls' school of the first rank, Canon Fletcher was selected to raise the foundation and select the faculty and get the students and find the money to run it. Thus came Hannah Moore Academy, in Baltimore, to which he devoted eleven years of his life. When the school grew beyond the care of one man, he laid down the work, went to England to study church architecture and brought back with him plans for a model church, parish house and rectory. These plans were followed in erecting the plant at Reisterstown, Md.

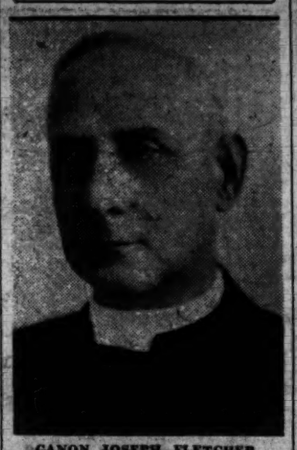
Once more he laid down his work and went to England, and there, at Oxford and in the British Museum, he completed his study of church architecture. During this time the World War broke out and he and Mrs. Fletcher were drawn into war work, first under Herbert Hoover and then under the British government.

Returning to Washington after the war, he took over the parishes of Brookland, Rock Creek, Holy Comforter and Transfiguration Chapel, sometimes having one parish, sometimes three, in labors abundant, but always finding time for diocesan work and never neglecting the library of choice works he spent 50 years collecting.

His last years now are to be spent in the Library of Washington Cathedral, which promises to be one of the most unique in the country. And Bishop Freeman, not content in providing this honor for him, has given him the first home in the Cathedral Close built for retired ministers.

Somehow one will always think of this dear old man as carrying brick and mixing mortar and carving church furniture at Sparrows Point. His Master was a carpenter.

ON VACATION



CANON JOSEPH FLETCHER.

CHURCH FEDERATION COMMITTEES MEET

Plans for Activity During Coming Fall Initiated at Sessions.

REPORTS ARE PRESENTED

During the past few days several of the important committees of the Washington Federation of Churches have had their June meetings. At these sessions plans were initiated for the work of next fall; in some instances for the remainder of the fiscal year.

The committee on public meetings, under the chairmanship of Dr. John Weidley, decided to have only four weeks of Lenten services next spring, instead of the five weeks of several years past. One very popular speaker has been secured already, Dr. Charles R. Brown, former dean of the Divinity School of Yale University.

The social service committee will undertake to make a larger number of contacts with local churches, especially in the interest of the work being done in the hospitals by Mrs. Murray, the hospital worker. This service was reported as being not only exceeding helpful, but constantly broadening in its opportunities and its usefulness. It is expected that next fall some other definite fields of activity will be entered, the members studying the situation in the meanwhile and agreeing upon the policy to be adopted at some meeting in the fall.

The committee on publicity hopes to secure a more effective cooperation between the churches and the local papers, especially with relation to the Saturday religious pages. This will be a subject of lengthy discussion later and it is expected that plans will be adopted by which improvements will be secured.

The committee on evangelism wishes to conserve the interests of the recent Kernahan campaign in every way possible and steps will be taken to that end, and to continue the evangelistic spirit which this campaign emphasized both by individual work and special effort by public preaching. This will be made one of the major objectives of the work of the Federation during the six or eight months following the vacation period.

The executive committee held its meeting in the First Congregational Church Thursday and adjourned until September. Mrs. C. O. Goodpasture gave a report of the committee on world friendship in the woman's council, telling of the very fine meeting held on a recent day when the Philippine treasure chests were brought together at New York Avenue Church. She stated that thus far a total of 302 chests had been received and sent by her committee to the Philippine Islands, each containing ten or fifteen items which the children there will be happy to have.

Several committees were appointed for the current year. One of the new groups, not yet fully organized, is the committee on young peoples' work, whose chairman is D. Roland Potter, president of the C. E. Union.

The Rev. Mark Depp, pastor of Cavalry Methodist Church, was designated as chairman of the committee on publicity to replace the Rev. S. E. Rose, who has been transferred from the city. Deep regret was expressed because of the approaching removal of Dr. David A. Robertson, president of the federation last year, who has accepted the presidency of Goucher College for Women in Baltimore.

METHODIST BODIES DISCUSSING REUNION

Protestant and Episcopal Group Leaders Plan to Settle Differences.

McDOWELL BACKS IDEA

One of the most important meetings of the summer, among church bodies, is that which is now conducting negotiations looking to the reunion of the Methodist Episcopal Church with the Methodist Protestant Church. Bishop W. F. McDowell of Washington, is the presiding officer and is leading the movement.

This is the one hundredth anniversary of the historic schism which led to the setting up of the Methodist Protestant Church. It came about over the episcopacy, and had its rise in Maryland. Some of the brethren in that State thought the bishops had too much authority and were using it autocratically, so they rebelled and the majority expelled them.

This was the first great session in American Methodism, and the Methodist Protestant has had 100 years of remarkable history, growing in membership, establishing schools and colleges and publishing houses, and developing a literature of its own. It is the largest of the non-Episcopal Methodisms on this continent.

If it should now reunite with the Methodist Episcopal Church, this will be regarded as the first break in the line which has held the 16 bodies of Methodist people apart for nearly a century.

Slavery Causes Schism.

Like most of the Protestant denominations in the United States, the Methodist Protestant Church split in 1858 over the question of slavery, and had the church North and the church South. When the tumult and the shouting were over, and the Blue and the Gray had buried their dead under the sod and the dew, the two branches of this denomination were reunited, and the slate wiped clean so far as the war was concerned.

It is remarkable that a similar fate befell another Southern Church which rose from a schism over doctrine and government — the Cumberland Presbyterian—which divided during the Civil War over slavery. When the war was over, the two wings came together, and the Southern wing, having the majority of the delegates, proceeded to remove from the minutes all reference to the war and all pledges of support to Mr. Lincoln and the Republican party. After a century of existence it reunited with the parent church, but could not take all of its members with it, and there is still a Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Repeated efforts have been made to reunite the Northern and Southern branches of the great Methodist Episcopal Church. The history is long and tortuous. When put to a vote, about five years ago, the Methodist Episcopal Church favored it, practically unanimously, but the Methodist Episcopal Church South defeated it disastrously, this despite the fact that all but four of the Southern bishops were for it and most of them on the stump advocating it.

No one knows what would happen if the question of union of the Methodist Episcopal and the Methodist Protestant Churches is put to a vote. The latter group is said to be strangely opposed and adamant in their opposition to any form of episcopacy. In Maryland and in North Carolina, where they are numerically very strong and highly respectable, the issue would probably be uncertain.

Southerners Are Adamant.

When the two great Episcopal Methodisms again vote on union—as they probably will in another decade—if the issue should carry, in the States of the Deep South it is probable that the Southern Methodists will not come in but will set up a church of their own, either continuing their ancient and historic name or adopting another. Once or twice in its history an effort was made to change the name of the church so as to remove from it any purely provincial nomenclature. This was defeated in the General Conference, meeting in Atlanta in 1874.

John Wesley never intended to set up a seperate church. He himself never left the Established Church of England and died a priest in good standing in its communion. But since his death his disciples have been separating and splitting up until there are now 25 or more groups of them. This does not include the Salvation Army, which was founded by a Methodist preacher, and which is the most nearly a world-wide church of any that claims to be Christian. It goes where all the others go and in some places that none of them is to be found. At least, that is one of its high claims.

One of the standard encyclopedias states that there are 25 different bodies of Methodist people, which trace their origin back to John Wesley. This does not by any means represent the full number of groups, for in England alone there is one group, known as the Independents, in which there are 146 Methodist churches, each one a government in itself and related to no other.

The four chief groups of English Wesleyans are these: Wesleyan Methodist Church, Primitive Methodist Church, United Methodist Church and Wesleyan Reform Union. None of them is episcopal in government.

16 Bodies of Methodist in U. S.

In the United States there are 16 bodies of Methodists, as follows:

Methodist Episcopal Church.
Methodist Episcopal Church South.
Methodist Protestant Church.
Wesleyan Methodist Church.
Free Methodist Church.
Primitive Methodist Church.
Congregational Methodist Church.
New Congregational Methodist Church.
African Methodist Episcopal Church.
African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.
Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.
Union American Methodist Episcopal Church.
African Union Methodist Protestant Church.
Zion Union Apostolic Church.
Reformed Methodist Union Episcopal Church.

In Canada there are two Methodist Churches, one in a union with the Presbyterian and Congregational Churches, and the other composed of Negro members, known as the British Methodist Episcopal Church.

The two larger American churches and the Canadian church united their missions in Japan in 1907 and established the Methodist Church of Japan, with a native bishop.

The first division in American Methodism occurred in 1793, and was led by an Irishman named O'Kelly, who did not like even the name of bishop. O'Kelly was a gifted man but a bitter one, and if he had been less furious in his attacks on dear old Bishop Asbury he might have made his revolution an important event.

Following him in 1820, the church expelled its Negro members and this led to the formation of the Negro churches.

Methodist Protestantism in 1830.

Then came the smash in 1830, again over bishops, and due, no doubt, to the teaching of O'Kelly, which led to the erection of the Methodist Protestant Church.

In 1844 occurred the great division when a majority of the delegates sought to remove from his office Bishop James O. Andrew, who was an unwilling slave owner. This attack was led by the abolition group in the church, and, in one way, from that historic conference dates the beginning of the Secession War. Until one has read the record, he can not conceive of the intense bitterness that grew out of the attack on Bishop Andrew. It never let up until the blood-letting was over. Calhoun and Webster took note of it at the time, and one of them said it previsioned war.

It was from the Southern Church that the secession came which is known as the Congregational Methodist Church and the New Congregational Church. It also had a colored Congregational branch, but that has disappeared. In 1870 the Southern Church, which then had the largest group of Negro Methodist members, set them aside, at their own request, in a church of their own, known as the Colored Methodist Church. For many years this church was largely supported by missionary money raised by the Southern Church. The Southern bishops organized the colored members into a chartered church, supervised the election of their bishops and then consecrated them to their work by the laying on of hands.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, which has one of the largest groups of Negro members, has never set them aside, but has chosen from their number several Negro bishops, who have the same authority as the white bishops. This has been one of the causes why the two Episcopal Methodists do not come together.—D. R. B.

Sentence Sermons

By the REV. HENRY B. WOODING
(Minister of the Eckington Presbyterian Church).

THE TEACHER.

When Nicodemus said to Jesus, "Thou art a teacher come from God," he gave a recognition of talent that the passing centuries have acknowledged.

The humble Galilean becomes the teacher of the ages.

Jesus taught with transparent clearness. Using the simple language of His day—the shepherd, friend, bread, growing grain, the trusting child, the lost boy—He illustrated the import of eternal truth.

The lover of literature finds in His parables the work of perfection. Who can add or change for improvement's sake the story of the Good Samaritan, or the Prodigal Son? They belong to the world's masterpieces.

Jesus taught the ethics of the Golden Rule—the laws of forgiveness and forgetfulness—which, if really practiced, would usher in a new and blessed social order and era of brotherhood and good will.

Jesus gave to man a new impression of God. When ye pray, say "Our Father." No longer was Jehovah to be thought of as a national or tribal God, or even the God of the fathers, but Our Father God. A Providence who is keenly interested in all. Whose love and thoughtfulness goes out to the obscure, the lowly, the careworn, the hopeless, the tempted, the defeated, the sorrowing and the bereaved.

He taught men to trust this loving Divine Father, and when men trust Him, they can say:

I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air,
I only know I can not drift
Beyond His love and care.

Conference Honors Capital Student

Luther H. Snyder Elected Y. M. C. A. President at Bushkill, Pa.

A high honor has been conferred upon Luther H. Snyder, eldest son of the Rev. Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

At the summer conference for men and women of the colleges and universities of the Middle Atlantic States, held at Bushkill, Pa., under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A., this Washington boy was elected president of the student division, which comprises all the student Y. M. C. A. in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

This is the largest of the ten student districts in the association, representing 130 schools and one-fourth of the undergraduates of the United States. Mr. Snyder is a senior at Gettysburg College and is president of the college Y. M. C. A., having recently been elected for a second term, the first time this honor has gone twice to the same student in the history of the college. It is also the first time that Gettysburg has had the president of the Middle Atlantic division. The Y. M. C. A. Building at Gettysburg is one of the most imposing buildings on the campus, representing an outlay of $150,000 in building and equipment. This was financed by the Gettysburg League of Women, of which Mrs. Henry W. Snyder is now the general president.

Spiritual Registrates Is Subject of Sermon

"Some good persons are ambitious to get their names in the Social Register," says the Rev. Harold E. Beatty, minister of the Georgetown Evangelical Church. "And the achievement is commendable. Would that people were as eager to get their names in the spiritual register!"

Those who go to this church tomorrow evening will learn if their names are in this latter blue book.

Wooding Still Debating Call to Chambersburg

The Rev. Henry B. Wooding, minister of the Eckington Presbyterian Church, has not yet accepted the call to the Central Presbyterian Church, of Chambersburg, Pa.

For the month of July, Mr. Wooding, who is one of the brightest young ministers in the city, will write the "Sentence Sermons" feature for the church page of The Post.

Church Vacation Schools Opened

Tabor Presbyterians Plan to Start Summer Bible Classes Monday.

Vacation Bible schools are in full blast at a number of Washington churches and will continue through the month of July. The attendance is said to be large in each one of them, the teaching staffs are very busy, and the children who are in attendance are taking keen interest in their classes.

Tabor Presbyterian Church will open its vacation school Monday morning at 9 o'clock. The teachers are Misses Fannie Granton, Marguerite Walker, Thelma Johnson, Mrs. Ernest Noble, and William Perry. Last summer this school had a total enrollment of 110 pupils from all denominations.

At the Second Baptist Church the vacation school is attracting unusual interest. It meets every day except Saturday.

Parish Will Open Retreat July 25

Rev. P. M. Finegan to Be in Charge of Immaculate Conception Devotions.

Plans which have been in the making for some time are now about complete for the first annual retreat of the men of Immaculate Conception Parish, which will be held at Manresa, Md., July 25 to July 28. An event of importance among the colored people of Washington will be the opening of the Fairmount Heights Presbyterian Church, at 5111 Grant street northeast, tomorrow. This will be the eighth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. Henry W. Campbell, who will preach at the morning service.

The edifice was begun in November, 1929, and has just been completed at a cost of $20,000. While it was going up the congregation worshipped in the Community House of the National Training School, of which Miss Nannie Burroughs is superintendent.

At the afternoon service, at 4 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. John W. Lee, of Philadelphia, field organizer of the board of national missions of the division of colored work, will be the speaker.

The Presbytery of Washington City assisted them in selling the old property and in selecting and purchasing a site and building a structure with modern equipment for work among the colored people of Deanwood. A committee of the presbytery consisting of the Rev. Freeley Rohrer, the Rev. Alfred E. Barrows, and Elder Walter K. Handy with James A. Dowrick, contractor and superintendent, has promoted the building enterprise.

PASSION PLAYERS WILL BE SEEN HERE

Freiburg Cast to Present Drama for Bible Class Association, Oct. 27.

ARE TO STAY ONE WEEK

The Freiburg Passion Play, which is to be in the Washington Auditorium for the entire week of October 27, under the auspices of the Organized Bible Class Association of the District of Columbia, has just completed a strenuous season of its first American tour. The last engagement before the players went for a rest in the Ozarks was at Kansas City, where many thousands were delighted with the three-hour presentation of the main events in the last week of the life of Christ upon this earth. Newspapers, civic leaders and churchmen were unanimous in their praise of this remarkable production.

The Organized Bible Class Association in taking the great responsibility involved in bringing to Washington this play is said to be doing a real service for the people. The chances are that this fall will close the tour of America, as the players' passports expire the last of this year and there is little likelihood of their coming to this country again.

Adolf Fassnacht, leader of the company and the portrayer of the Christus, says the players are very happy at the prospect of spending a week in the American Capital City and that they consider it one of the really big events of the fall season.

A special representative of the company will be in the city some six weeks before the date of the performances and the players have arranged to arrive several days in advance so that they may adapt, in the most advantageous way, the play to the local auditorium.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

DISEASES OF THE HANDS.

IT IS agreed that most of the skin diseases of the hands are the result of something having to do with occupation. The blood as a cause of skin disease of the hands is not worth considering. The same statement as to diet is almost true. There are some infections, such as smallpox, scarlet fever and measles, tuberculosis and syphillis which cause skin eruptions of the hands, and the careful physician examines the hands as a part of his work just as he watches the hands in pellagra. But these are the exceptions.

The rule is, when a skin trouble develops on the hands the first question which comes to mind is, what's wrong with my work? What part of my job causes the skin of my hands to be poisoned? In bringing this about a long list of causes must be considered. The list includes: Wearing dyed gloves, sweating due to wearing rubber gloves, soap and water due to laundry work, resins of wood, poisons of one sort or another in hides and hair, and a great variety of chemicals.

Dr. Sutherland Campbell brings a new one to the attention of the people. He finds that persons engaged in squeezing oranges in the production of orange juice are prone to develop a skin disease of the fingers, particularly around the nails. Studying these cases with the microscope he found the cause to be a yeast or a yeastlike organism. This yeast, or near-yeast, grew in the body of the nail itself, as well as in its bed and around the edge. It is this capacity for the germ to grow in the substance of the nail which makes cure difficult in this disorder, as in some cases of ringworm of the toes. Dr. Sutherland Campbell grew the micro-organism in various ways in the laboratory. He had some success in inoculating it into oranges, both into the peel and into the pulp. In some cases it caused a blue mold to grow on the orange; in others, not much could be seen with the unaided eye in the injected oranges. He went as far as he dared in proving that a culture could cause the disease around the nails.

The greatest value of Dr. Sutherland Campbell's paper is in showing us that handling oranges and orange juice is another possible cause of skin disease of the hands. If oranges and orange juice are to be so classed the chances are that peach pickers, grape packers and cider makers may have reason to think of their occupation as a possible cause of eczemas and tetters on their hands.

EGGS, RAW AND COOKED.

R. O. writes: Of what value is a raw egg? Soft boiled? Hard boiled? Fried?

REPLY.

Eggs are wholesome. There is no particular difference in food value between raw eggs and eggs cooked in different ways. Nor is there much difference in digestibility or assimilability.

Doubles Finals Also Gained by Allison and Van Ryn.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 4 (A.P.).—Helen Wills Moody won her fourth successive Wimbledon tennis championship today by beating Elizabeth Ryan, 6—2, 6—2, in the women's singles final, but that was only an incident in the 4th of July play that brought about four all-American title matches at Wimbledon—an unprecedented outcome of England's classic tennis meeting.

So many Americans are elbowing each other out of the path to titles that the tournament must stretch into a third week to give them all an equal chance. Wilmer Allison, the slim Texan, plays Big Bill Tilden for the men's singles crown tomorrow. With Johnny Van Ryn today Allison won a fine match from the Britons, J. Colin Gregory and Ian G. Collins, 4—6, 7—5, 6—3, 6—3, and will therefore play in the men's doubles final against George Lott and John Doeg, who whipped the last of the French, the great doubles team of Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, 8—6, 3—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Doubles Held Over Until Monday.

So that Allison won't have to play two hard final matches in one day, the doubles play will be set over to Monday afternoon. Besides Allison and Tilden, the other title play tomorrow will pit Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan against Edith Cross, of San Francisco, and Sarah Palfrey, Boston miss, in the women's doubles final, while Jack Crawford and Miss Ryan will play Daniel Prenn and Miss Krahwingel for the mixed doubles championship.

Thus the finalists in men's singles and doubles, and women's singles and doubles are all Americans, while Miss Ryan is in the mixed doubles. Today this versatile American woman veteran complained because nobody in the big tennis galleries seemed to love her. Living in England, she is not an American but was born in America so she's not English.

Miss Ryan Gives Mrs. Moody Real Battle.

Nevertheless, she gave Mrs. Moody a run for her title although the scores do not indicate it, Queen Helen of the strong right arm, is rarely called upon to cover court on the run, but time after time today Miss Ryan, with one of her delicate chop shots, which drop just over the net, made Helen run for it. When the champion would barely reach the ball in time to tap it back across the net, Miss Ryan would punch it for a certain point winner. It was spectacular and entertaining and a little undignified for the queen of tennis. Good strategy that it was, Miss Ryan couldn't do it often enough to win many games although she made a match of it all the way through.

After dropping the opening game, Mrs. Moody took the second from 30 and the third from 15. Miss Ryan played a perfect drop shot to go 30-all in the fourth game, but Mrs. Moody won from deuce.

Miss Ryan broke Mrs. Moody's service to win the fifth game from 30, but in the sixth game she netted continually and lost it from 30, whereupon Mrs. Moody served a love game to lead 5—2 and won the next from deuce for the first set, 6—2.

Mrs. Moody Wins Love Game.

Mrs. Moody won the first game of the second set at love, but Miss Ryan, serving, went to 40-love in the second, delicately chopping her shots barely over the net, drawing Helen up, then smashing her return. Miss Ryan won this game from 15.

The world's champion then began to forge ahead, winning the third from 30, fourth from deuce and fifth from 15 for a 4—1 lead. Miss Ryan replied by serving a love game, but Mrs. Moody won the seventh from 15 and the next from deuce for the set and title.

Queen Helen took her fourth Wimbledon championship by playing calmly and steadily and hitting the ball with great power as usual. She was never for a moment in danger of losing, but Miss Ryan played some great shots and covered court with neverfailing agility and alertness.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald saw Mrs. Moody retain her title and also saw George Lott and Johnny Doeg start the American celebration by beating Cochet and Brugnon in a brilliant battle. The Americans hammered steadily at Brugnon and finally swept through Cochet's service to clinch the final game of a victory that materially heightened the United States chances of regaining the Davis Cup next month.

HELEN WILLS MOODY.

Gehringer's Homer Gives Tigers Two Wins

Detroit, Mich., July 4 (A.P.).—Charlie Gehringer broke up a 12-inning game with a home run into the right-field bleachers to give Detroit a 4-to-3 win over the Cleveland Indians this afternoon and victories in both games of a double-header. The Tigers won the morning game by 5 to 4 in ten innings.

The second game was featured by the Tigers' base running which included six stolen bases. Desautels and Johnson worked a double steal in the seventh, the catcher scoring.

Vic Sorrell allowed twelve hits, but lasted through the morning game. George Uhle pitched the afternoon game for Detroit, turning in his seventh victory of the season.

Stella Walsh Breaks Three World Records

Dallas, July 4 (A.P.).—The flying feet of Stella Walsh, Cleveland flash, and the strong right arm of Mildred "Babe" Didrickson, 17-year-old Dallas star, sent five world's athletic records for women tumbling into the discard in the national A. A. U. track and field meet at Ownby Stadium here today.

Running for the New York Central Railway, Miss Walsh set new international marks in all three events in which she competed, the 100 and 220-yard dashes and the broad jump. In skipping the century in 11.1, she defeated the former record holder, Betty Robinson, of Chicago, by a scant 2 inches. The previous record was 11.2.

The Didrickson lass, competing her first year in track and field, wrecked the former world marks both in the javelin and baseball throws and finished second to Miss Walsh in the broad jump. She threw a standard baseball 268 feet 10½ inches, to beat the former mark by more than 10 feet.

ROBINS STAY IN LEAD BY DIVIDING

Clark Stars in 5-2 Win After Giants Triumph, 5-4.

NEW YORK, July 4 (A.P.).—The Brooklyn Robins clung to their precarious hold on first place in the National League today by winning the afternoon game of a double-header, 5 to 2, after the Giants had taken the morning contest, 5 to 4, in an eleven-inning struggle. The Chicago Cubs also got an even break.

William Watson Clark of Brooklyn, held the Giants to six hits in the second game, one of which was a home run by Lindstrom. The Robins made some timely hits off Bill Walker, getting two runs on a single hit on two occasions. Finn's Homer following a walk turned the trick the second time.

The Giants scored four runs in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings of the opener. Dazzy Vance pitched the entire contest, giving eleven hits. Herman, Gilbert and Hogan hit homers in the morning.

Young Corbett Beats Champion on Decision

San Francisco, July 4 (A.P.).—Young Corbett, sensational southpaw fighter from Fresco, Calif., punched his way to a ten-round decision over Young Jack Thompson, welterweight champion, before a huge crowd here today. The title was not at stake.

It was the third time Corbett defeated the Oakland Negro, who won the title from Jackie Fields in Detroit last May. There was no question as to the decision.

In the ninth round Corbett, well in the lead, clipped a left to Thompson's body that dropped the title holder for a nine count. He was groggy when he staggered to his feet but managed to weather the storm of punches shot in as Corbett strove desperately for a knockout. Corbett closed with a tenth-round assault.

A. A. U. Swimmers Set Two World Records

Long Beach, Calif., July 4 (A.P.).—National A. A. U. swimmers today broke two more world records.

Helen Madison, Seattle mermaid marvel, set a women's new 440-yard free style mark, and George Kojac, behemoth of the New York Athletic Club, negotiated 200 meters backstroke for a new world record.

Kojac was competing at 220 yards, but his time for the furlong was superior to Toshio Iriye, Japanese natator, who splashed through the metric distance in 2 minutes 37 8-10 seconds in 1928. Kojac's figure was 2:35 4-10 and left him not only in possession of the 200-meter record but also a new American mark for the furlong since it had eclipsed his own former time.

Miss Madison's time of 5 minutes 39 4-10 seconds was eight seconds faster than Miss Josephine McKim set last year.

MACKS DROP FIRST, WIN SECOND

Bow to Late Rallies of Sox, 7-6, Rommell Wins, 4-2.

BOSTON, July 4 (A.P.).—The Athletics broke even in a double-header here today with the Red Sox. A holiday gathering of 30,000 persons saw the Sox take the first game, 7 to 6, and the A.'s the second, 4 to 2.

Rommel held the Bostonians to six hits in the second game, and the visitors scored all their runs off Lisenbee in the seventh. McNair's single and Bishop's double followed two passes and a hit batter.

The Sox came from behind to win the first game in which Bishop, Simmons and Miller of the Athletics got homers.

Max Schmeling Given Enthusiastic Welcome

Berlin, July 4 (A.P.).—A small crowd saw Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion, come down out of the clouds today with the laurels he won in America from Jack Sharkey on a foul.

The fans waiting inside the Tempelhof Airport for the low-wing monoplane bearing the title holder and his mother from Bremerhaven could have been squeezed into a hangar and the crowd outside the fence did not endanger the railings.

A small army of police detailed to the airport to control the expected throng had nothing to do. Schmeling was cordially "hocked," however. Before leaving he received a belt, gift of the Union of German Boxers and spoke into a radio microphone.

"I'm glad to get back to Berlin," he said, "I am thankful for the confidence the people have in me and hope I will always be worthy of it."

American Horse Wins In Newmarket Stake

Newmarket, England, July 4 (A.P.). An American horse, C. J. Ryan's Instigator II, won the Princess Stakes of $1,000 with extras over a 5-furlong course today.

Sir Abe Bailey's Miss Jessica finished second, with Geodfrey Allen's London Wall third.

MARBERRY HOLDS VISITING SLUGGERS SAFE AFTER JONES BLANKS THEM IN FIRST GAME; RUTH AND MYER THRILL FANS WITH HOMERS

Manush, Spiked, May Miss Other Frays With Yankees.

Ruth Deserves Credit for Playing Despite Injured Finger.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

FIRST place may be in the grasp of the Nationals this afternoon, but they will have to have some help if they hope to pass the Mackmen. For their own part, they must again humble the New York Yankees and then the Red Sox must hop on the leading Athletics.

In view of their showing against "Ruth, Gehrig and Company" so far this season, Johnson's men believe that they can come through with their part of the program, for they have won seven of their nine 1930 meetings with the New Yorkers and their double victory of yesterday has given them added confidence, while it probably has worked just the opposite way with Shawkey's team, which did not look any too good in the holiday battles.

Lloyd Brown is ready to do the flinging for the Nats this afternoon, while Herb Pennock, cagey but slipping southpaw, is expected to work on the hill for the visitors, who end the Nats home stay with a single game here tomorrow.

Browns' Task Made Harder.

Brown's task will be harder in view of the injury which Outfielder Heinie Manush, who received a slight spike on his right foot in the first game of yestrday's twin bill. This occurrd in the eighth frame when, on taking two bases on Pitcher Carroll's bad peg toward first trying to pick the runner off, Shortstop Wuestling went high in the air for Gehrig's throw and came down on it. Manush is almost sure to be missing today and possibly tomorrow, too.

The big fly-chaser was unable to play in the second game, this causing Manager Johnson to do considerable shifting. He started Sam Rice in center, Dave Harris in right and George Loepp in left. While Manush is out, the Nats probably will line up this way against southpaws, with West working against right-handed pitching and playing center, Rice going back to right.

S. R. O. Sign Out Early.

For the first time this season, the "standing room only" sign was hung out at the Griffith Stadium yesterday, fans being advised that all grand stand seats were filled nearly an hour before the first game was scheduled to start. An indication of the doings around the park may be gleaned from the fact that all automobile parking yards were filled to capacity and traffic on Georgia avenue was diverted from 11:30 on.

By this hour, the wise fans who had not purchased reserve seat tickets had hustled to the park and the entire grand stand between first and third bases was filled to capacity, including the aisles and the perch on the top rail in the back. Some of the more youthful cash customers

Cardinals Pound Out 2 Victories Over Reds

St. Louis, Mo., July 4 (A.P.).—The Cardinals won both ends of a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds here today. In the opening game, the Cardinals hit hard behind Flint Rhem's rather effective pitching and won, 15 to 4, while in the second contest Syl Johnson hurled brilliantly until the ninth and the Redbirds triumphed, 6 to 2. Johnson shut out the visitors until the ninth, when Swanson and Kelly hit home runs. Walker hit a homer for the Reds in the opening game. Larry Benton started the first game for the Reds, but he was treated roughly and retired. The Cardinals continued their assault on May and Campbell.

BLUE LARKSPUR WINS $33,000 ARLINGTON FEATURE

Breaks Track Record in Contest

Flying Heels Scores in Feature Race at Aqueduct.

CHICAGO, July 4 (A.P.).—Blue Larkspur, a 4-year-old bay colt by Black Servant out of Blossom Time, the ace of the stable of Edward R. Bradley, the leading money winner in 1929, established a new track record that in all probability will stand for some time when he was winner of the Stars and Stripes Handicap, the outstanding feature of an excellent card at Arlington Park. His time for the mile and an eighth was 1:49 2-5, which was 1 1-5 seconds under the record of 1:50 3-5 established by Misstep on July 20, 1929.

Misstep, from the Le Mar Stock Farm, was second and Sun Beau, racing in the colors of W. S. Kilmer, was third.

The Stars and Stripes Handicap, for 3-year-olds and up, was worth $26,050 to the winner, $4,000 to second, $2,000 to third and $1,600 to the fourth stable.

Victory Shows Injury Corrected.

It was Blue Larkspur's second start since he won the Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct in June, 1929, although he had been taken to Saratoga where he went lame in training early last August. His win today proves beyond a doubt this injury has been fully corrected.

In his first start at Arlington Park on June 30 he ran second to Fair Ball.

Blue Larkspur was carried very wide rounding the first turn, but gained a contending position midway of the back stretch, was saved to the final quarter and, coming fast around the stretch turn, wore down the leaders and drew clear reaching the last eighth, but was forced out in the severe drive to hold Misstep safe. Misstep began very slowly and had to race on the outside, but worked his way up gradually closing wide gap and, finishing fast, outgamed Sun Beau in the final strides. Sun Beau always displayed good speed, kept close up on the inside and made a strong bid in the stretch run, but could not get to the leaders and weakened slightly in the final issue. Silverdale could never reach contention, but closed much ground in the last quarter.

Flying Heels Wins Aqueduct Feature.

Aqueduct Race Track, July 4 (A.P.). Gifford A. Cochran's Flying Heels, carrying 118 pounds, scored a drive in the Carter Handicap, which featured the closing-day program here today. The race was run in the presence of 15,000 fans and the son of Flying Ebony ran the 7 furlongs in 1:24 2-5 over a good track. The Fair Stable's Sarazan II was second and George D. Widener's Jack High third.

Jean Valjean Scores At Latonia.

Latonia, Ky., July 4 (A.P.).—The Keeneland stud's Jean Valjean won the Independence Handicap, $10,000 added attraction on this afternoon's card. Easter Stockings, racing in the Audley Farm colors, was second and Jack Howard's Islam was third. The distance, 1 mile and three-sixteenths, was covered in 1:59 2-5. The winner paid $20.02 for each $2 ticket and earned $9,625 for his owner. The Audley Farm collected $2,000 for second, Jack Howard's portion was $1,000 for third, and $275 went to the youth horse, Royal Julian.

—Latonia Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THE Quickstep Handicap, long a fixture at Latonia, is up for decision today. It is six furlongs, and has an added value of $5,000.

STOCK MARKET is such an improved horse that he is selected to win, but NELLIE CUSTIS and ILLEGITIMATE are dangerous. ILLEGITIMATE is the class but he has been beaten time and again by worse horses than these. CAYUGA is a stake horse, and no one can tell when he will wake up, but his forte is not on a fast track.

These old favorites are passing out, and giving sway to younger blood, which points to STOCK MARKET as the most probable winner in a field that off-hand could be said to outclass him. ILLEGITIMATE won a race a few days ago, but he is not very consistent. JACK HOWE on winter form, could be easily picked in this line-up, but he has been going back rapidly.

FIRST RACE—This claiming affair 3-year-olds and up at six furlongs seems to a large extent between BATHER and MONNIE. BATHER is required to carry top weight of 117 pounds, while MONNIE has 17 less. BATHER is the solid horse of the field, and won a few days ago. PERJURY looks like the third horse.

SECOND RACE—The Eden Park purse is for 2-year-olds, maidens with allowances. OSWEGO is about the smartest maiden of this age at this track, and should be graduated in this dash. ARTHUR LEE, coupled with SUDDEN, as the Collins and Hardy entry, probably will be the contenders. The first named of the entry as a good prospect, but has had little racing experience. PEACE JIMMY looks best for third money, and would have a better chance in the mud.

THIRD RACE—ZETA is selected in thethird race. She will be opposed in chief on form by COOTS, and at the distance her early speed should carry her over. STUPENDOUS is always to be reckoned with among platers. MASTER STAR has speed, but prefers mud. COOTS, with 117 pounds, seems at a disadvantage.

FIFTH RACE—A small field goes in the Highland Stock Farm allowance race, fifth on the program, with NIATO figured best of the five horses starting. CULLODEN should beat TYPHOON for place money.

SIXTH RACE — AIMEE GOLDSMITH, whose form has been good all year, is regarded much the best in the sixth race at a mile and a sixteenth. HIRAM KELLY can go the distance and may be a keen contender. CRASH has an outside chance.

SEVENTH RACE—THISTLE ARIOUS is best in the seventh race. He will have MIDSOLEA to beat, which was recently a winner. ELIZABETH has a good chance to show.

ARLINGTON PARK offers the Hyde Park Stakes, $5,000 added, for 2-year-olds. BIRTHDAY GIFT has been beating the best 2-year-olds around Chicago and probably will take this event, but Harry Payne Whitney has RIDEAWAY in the race, which has had little racing, but is regarded as of stake quality. It might be unsafe to overlook the Whitney colt. INSCO or JOHN MILL will hold the others safe. The Arlington Oaks for 3-year-old fillies, also will be run today. SNOWFLAKE seems to be queen of the fillies, and having won the Illinois Oaks, should add this stake also. ERIN is the contender, and her race in New York the other day was a standout performance. PANSY WALKER should be third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUI MONSIEUR, $9.68, $5.90, $3.80; PARTICIPATE, $22.48, $8.24; ESTIN, $3.60.

OUI MONSIEUR, forward under steadying restraint and responding gamely when called upon, though forced wide in stretch, disposed of PARTICIPATE after a mild drive and easily drew out near the end. PARTICIPATE quickly disposed of CAPTAIN J. S. and saved ground after taking lead, but faltered when challenged by the winner. ESTIN settled well at first but after three furlongs, closed gamely under punishment and held ROLL 'EM DOWN safe. Latter, away slowly, closed strong on inside through stretch. PRINCESS DONNA lacked usual early foot.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Betsy Ross. For 2-year-old maidens, fillies. Start good for all but Sheen. Won driving. Went to post at 2:54. Off at 2:54½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADA EPINARD, $14.64, $6.94, $4.56; ALYSSUM, $4.32, $3.08; GRADISET, $2.86.

ADA EPINARD, racing as much the best, shook off ALYSSUM on the turn and, increasing advantage, drew out at end. ALYSSUM moved up strongly rounding the far turn, challenged the winner determinedly in the final quarter, but was not good enough. GRADISET, forced wide on both turns, came fast when straightened in stretch and outfinished WITCH WAY. WITCH WAY, always close up, began tiring in final sixteenth. PRINCESS PEGGY could never reach contention.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:35. Winner, J. N. Camden's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ELLICE, $11.16, $4.66, $3.70; TANTIVY, $3.38, $2.86; BACCIOCCO, $5.36.

ELLICE followed BACCIOCCO close to final three-sixteenths and, racing around latter in command, drew away easily. TANTIVY, held partisan to the final furlong and forced wide while racing strongly through stretch, closed an immense gap, but could not threaten the winner. BACCIOCCO set the early pace under pressure, saved ground on both turns, but weakened when final test came. TYPHOON raced in close third position most of the way. FIDDLER showed a stiff effort.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:12. Off at 4:20. Winner, A. L. Ferguson's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIBERTY ACE, $36.08, $16.20, $8.96; TWILL, $7.40, $5.82; FUDGE, $8.70.

LIBERTY ACE, away fast, and under good handling, was hustled into a good early lead and, saving ground, easily held opposition safe throughout. TWILL, always closest in pursuit of the leader, colsed gamely under hard urging and, though gaining some ground, could not menace the winner. FUDGE, in close attendance of the leaders, outlasted JOURNEY'S END in a hard drive. JOURNEY'S END suffered from lack of racing room, but when clear, was always full of run in the last furlong. JUNIE WILLIAMS, very fractious at gate, fell, then raced well to the final furlong, but quit when put to a drive.

FIFTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $10,000 added. The Independence Day Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:55. Off at 4:58½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JEAN VALJEAN, $20.02, $5.90, $3.46; EASTER STOCKINGS, $3.24, $2.48; ISLAM, $2.94.

JEAN VALJEAN came over rather sharply soon after the start, assumed the lead at once, was steadied along while setting pace, shook off repeated challenges from EASTER STOCKINGS and, holding on gamely, had enough left to hold EASTER STOCKINGS safe in a hard drive. EASTER STOCKINGS followed the winner under stout restraint, raced slightly wide on back stretch and, closing steadily on winner when hard urged through stretch drive, was gradually wearing him down. ISLAM, never far back, but in tight quarters near half-mile, was taken to outside and, closing well through stretch, easily held others safe. ROYAL JULIAN had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:35. Off at 5:36. Winner, F. Hurst and Bauer's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOODMAN, $12.68, $4.70, $2.94; SOUR MASH, $3.94, $2.80; ELEVEN SIXTY, $2.78.

GOODMAN, under stout restraint for six furlongs, moved up steadily when let down and, taking the lead midway of the stretch, outlasted SOUR MASH in a hard stretch drive. SOUR MASH, allowed to race far back until reaching the far turn, moved up with a rush when urged, appeared dangerous the last three-sixteenths and, getting almost on even terms with the winner, faltered slightly near the end. ELEVEN SIXTY was never along close up and raced around MY HOBBY on the turn into the home stretch, but weakened in last furlong. ACCOUNT closed some ground after racing in last position first half mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 6:14½. Off at 6:15. Winner, S. Stone's b. f. (3), by Huon—Bronz Wing. Trained by W. Lee. Value, $1,000; second, $200; third, $100. Time, 0:25 1-5, 0:49 1-5, 1:16, 1:42 2-5, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NELLIE LYONS, $5.30, $3.50, $2.50; MYTH, $3.60, $2.60; BROAD AXE, $3.46.

NELLIE LYONS, forced wide on the first turn, was taken in hand thereafter and, rated along, improved position steadily and when let down raced MYTH into submission and held speed in reserve at end. MYTH saved ground while setting the pace, held on stubbornly when challenged, but tiring near the end, just lasted to outstay BROAD AXE. Latter moved up swiftly rounding the stretch turn but, being much used in reaching contention, weakened badly in the final issue. DISTURB quit after racing well to the final furlong. PETER DIXON was through after going five furlongs.

3 SEEDED PLAYERS DEFEATED IN DISTRICT TENNIS

Gill, Kurland And Sendel Beaten

Halstead Wins From Mexican Davis Cup Player.

Charest Shows Form in 3-Set Victory in 1st Round.

SEEDED players did not fare so well in the first day's play of the District of Columbia tennis championship yesterday, three of the favored eight being alliminated in the very first round. While probably the five best of the octet came through with heads unbowed, Federico Sendel, Commander C. C. Gill and Louis Kurland were beaten in their initial starts—an unusual occurrence for the start of a tournament.

Sendel, who had remained here following his play for the Mexican Davis Cup Team, was beaten by Ensign Merwin Halstead in two sets, 6—4, 6—3; Gill was shunted from further consideration by Lieut. G. S. Smith, 10—12, 6—1, 6—3, while Kurland lost his opportunity of continuing in play by failing to appear for his first-round match. Edward La Fleur, another Baltimore player, also was not on the scene and defaulted with Kurland.

Mangan May Be Forced to Default.

Another favorite may be compelled to default today, however, as Tom Mangan, in his match with Bud Markey yesterday, suffered a blister on his foot which necessitated medical treatment. It was extremely doubtful last night whether he would be able to play today against Don Garber.

By winning both his first and second round matches, Clarence Charest, defending champion, withstood the opinions of those who had the 46-year-old veteran on the decline. Charest dropped his opening set of the day to Donald Morrison, 6—8, but quickly recovered and landed the next two, 6—3, 6—0, and then went on to win his second match in straight sets. Bob considers Dooly Mitchell and Billy Jacobs were the other seeded players to win.

Moorhead's Play A Feature.

The play of a newcomer, however, outfeatured the rest of the day's contestants, J. L. Moorehead, scoring over two impressive opponents to advance to the third round. Alan Staubley, George Washington University net star, was Moorhead's victim in the first encounter by 6—1 and 6—3 scores, while Bob Elliott, one of Baltimore's leading players' fell before the rising Moorhead, 6—4, 6—2.

Play in the singles will continue at 10 o'clock this morning while doubles competition will start at 1 p. m. The following pairings for the latter was made last night:

The Chicago Cubs are in the thick of the National League pennant fight. The club's all-star outfield (left) and the return to form of Guy Bush, big righthander, were instrumental in the upward push.

Norman Frost Wins Manchester Golf Play

Special to The Washington Post.

Manchester, Vt., July 4.—Norman B. Frost, of Washington, D. C., won the thirtieth annual Independence Day golf handicap at Ekwanok C. C. today in a field of 100 players. Frost had a round of 78, which, with an allowance of four strokes, left him 3 up on bogey.

Walber's Cruiser Wins 353-Mile Ocean Race

Special to The Washington Post.

Chestertown, Md., July 4.—Of the three cruisers of the Yachtmen's Club of Philadelphia which left that city last Wednesday on a 353-mile ocean race down the Delaware Bay and Atlantic Ocean around the Virginia Capes and up the Chesapeake Bay to the summer rendezvous here at Worton Creek, two finished the course, while the Josephine, flagship of the fleet owned by Commodore Charles Walber, was disabled off Ocean City, Md., and was towed into that seaside resort by the United States Coast Guard early today. The Antares, owned and piloted by Victor Emerson, of Philadelphia, crossed the finish line at 10 o'clock this morning after 28 hours out, and Dr. Eugene Swayne's Eugenic came across the line at noon in second place. The cruiser of Commodore Walber of the Tristate Yacht Club is expected here early tomorrow after undergoing repairs, according to word received from the Ocean City Coast Guard.

In the airplane race from the Camden, N. J., airport the plane of Mrs. Isaac Dixon, of Baltimore, piloted by her daughter, Miss Deborah Dixon, of this city, arrived here first, followed closely by the machine of Robert Hewitt, vice president of the Camden Airport, piloted by Ralph Clifton. Five other planes made a safe landing here after the leaders. Miss Dixon was granted a pilot's license recently. The week-end activities are being held under the auspices of the two Philadelphia Yachting Clubs.

100-Mile Auto Race Captured by Shaw

Bridgeville, Pa., July 4 (A.P.).—Indianapolis, a city known far and wide for its automobile racing, today sent the winner to the Pittsburgh-Bridgeville track in the person of Wilbur Shaw, who took the 100-mile A. A. A. Independence Day Sweepstakes, covering the distance in 1 hour 29 minutes 57 2-5 seconds. He averaged 66.9 miles an hour.

Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia pilot, finished the century in second place, two laps behind the winner, and Burt Karnatz, Detroit driver, was third. Dave Evans, Evansville (Ind.) entry, came in after the Detroiter.

A series of mishaps, which started in the qualifying trials, kept Billy Arnold, of Chicago, from making a strong bid for first honors. Arnold, who won at Indianapolis on Memorial Day and Altoona on Flag Day, needed today's race to give him the A. A. A. championship for the year, but fate ruled otherwise.

Arnold's accidents left him unhurt and he finished seventh with a time of 1 hour 35 minutes and 23 1-5 seconds. The time lost when his mount skidded on the first and thirty-ninth laps, kept him from making a better showing.

19 Victories in Row As Easton Nine Cops 2

Special to The Washington Post.

Easton, Md., July 4.—Easton won its nineteenth straight game today by defeating St. Michaels both games in a double-header, one in the morning at St. Michaels by score of 9 to 8, and one this afternoon at Easton by a score of 3 to 2. The afternoon game was one of the best played and the hardest fought ever witnessed at Federals Park. Both teams played good ball, but the game was virtually a pitchers' battle between Hummer and Smith. Hummer struck out ten, and Smith, for the visitors, fanned nine men.

TRIPLE PLAY AT COLUMBIA.

Columbia, S. C., July 4 (A.P.).—The Columbia Comers pulled the first triple play of the South Atlantic League season today in the first game of a twin bill with Asheville. The Tourists won the game, 12 to 0.

District Courses Crowded For Holiday Golf Tourneys

Thousands Take Advantage of Ideal Day. Events Staged at 11 Clubs—Two-Day Tourney Starts at Washington.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

WITH a clear sky overhead and a cool breeze sweeping down from the northwest, thousands of District golfers yesterday took advantage of the holiday to participate in competitions on eleven District club courses, while the public links were crowded from early dawn until after sunset.

At the Bannockburn club alone more than 200 players teed off during the day and all of the competitive events attracted a large field.

At the Argyle club, where a flag tournament was the attraction, Ira L. Wright was the winner. With a gross score of 92 and a handicap of 22, he finished two strokes down the nineteenth fairway, one stroke ahead of Maj. J. W. Meehan. The third prize was won by P. W. LeDuc, who holed out on the eighteenth green. In the fourth and fifth places were M. L. Kraft and Thos. S. Pitt who respectively planted their flags 2 inches and 3 feet from the eighteenth pin.

Col. Seaman Leads at "Service" Club.

Competition at the Army, Navy and Marine Corps club was a blind bogey and Col. A. C. Seaman, with a score of 101—24—77, was the winner, 77 being the lucky number. Mrs. T. L. Ransom, 104—29—75, was second, and Lt. Commander E. B. Gibson, 109—35—74, was third.

Several events at the Bannockburn club kept the members busy throughout the day. The principal feature was a tombstone tournament which was won by J. T. McCarthy, who with a handicap of eight finished 2 inches from the pin on the nineteenth hole. Prew Savoy, 10 inches from the cup, and John Thacker, 14 inches away, won second and third prizes. The blindfold driving contest was won by Miss Julia Connor, who, without seeing the ball, drove it 190 yards down the fairway, Wm. L. Pendergast coming in second with 180 yards. In the flag tournament for women the winner was Mrs. J. O. Rhyne, whose ball on her last stroke was in the cup on the eighteenth green. Mrs. Middleton Beaman, who was thirty yards from the eighteenth green, won second prize.

The President's Cup competition at the Beaver Dam Club, eighteen holes, medal play, handicap allowance, was won by A. D. Robertson, with a card of 92—25—67. H. A. Neff, whose score was 82—14—68, lost out by one stroke. There was a triple tie for third prize between W. T. Henderson, 87—18—69; C. R. Miller, 87—18—69, and J. C. Johnson, 82—13—69. The men's driving contest was won by William H. White, with 275 yards, while M. F. McCarthy, 1 foot behind, captured the second prize.

In the approaching contest, 85 yards from the eighteenth green, Jesse P. Baggett was the winner, pitching his ball within 8 feet of the cup, while M. F. McCarthy, 9 feet away, was second. Baggett and McCarthy also finished as winner and runner-up in the putting contest.

Beaver Dam Honors to A. D. Robertson.

In the eighteen-hole medal play handicap for women at Beaver Dam the winner was Mrs. Ora Emge, with a card of 105—15—90, while Mrs. Alma von Steinner won low gross with a score of 98. The women's driving contest was won by Mrs. Emge, 190 yards, with Mrs. H. A. Neff, second, 175 yards. In the approaching contest for women, 50 yards from the ninth green, the winner was Mrs. Carl Mitchell, whose ball was 12 feet from the pin. Mrs. T. N. Beavers, 14 feet from the pin, winning second prize. Mrs. von Steinner and Mrs. Stone were winner and runner-up, respectively, in the putting contest.

Admiral Taylor Leads At Chevy Chase.

The match play against par, handicap allowance, at the Chevy Chase Club, was won by Admiral P. M. Taylor, who was 4 up on par, O. S. Albright, 2 up on par, finishing as runner-up. In the tombstone tournament for the seniors, Admiral Taylor was also the winner, scoring 78 gross and finishing on the nineteenth green. Gen. H. P. McCain, Walter G. Peter and Col Joseph Wheeler won second, third and fourth prizes respectively.

A large field competed in the four-ball best ball match, eighteen holes, medal play, handicap allowance, at the Columbia Club. The winners were B. P. Holzberg and John Holzberg, with a card of 74—19—55, their nearest competitors, who finished second, being L. E. Sinclair and L. S. Jullien, with a score of 74—14—60. W. W. Owens and W. H. Finckel, with 73—12—61, and Ralph B. Fleharty and I. E. Shoemaker, with 77—16—61, tied for third prize.

Maj. J. E. McClure led the field at the Congressional Country Club yesterday, with a low gross score of 42—37—79, with Melvin Bennett finishing as runner-up with 40—41—81. There was a triple tie for low net between Stewart Mitchell, 84—14—70; W. D. Osgood, 93—23—70, and W. K. Ballston Divides At Charlottesville

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 4.—Blanked, 5 to 0, in the morning game, the Ballston Club, of the Capital City League, defeated the S. & R. Silk Mills Nine here this afternoon, 11 to 4. Crowe, on the mound for the locals this morning, held the visitors to two hits, and fanned fifteen. His double in the second frame scored two runs. King tightened after that frame and there was no more scoring until the eighth, when Randall's single sent two men across.

The afternoon contest was close up to the sixth, when Gardner, who had relieved Breeden on the mound, was struck in the face by a batted ball and was forced to retire. The locals then went to pieces, being credited with seven errors. For Ballston, Lewis and Coppage contributed triples and Johnson and Herritz doubles. All but one of Silk Mills' runs were driven in by Haggard, who got two home runs.

Miller hurled another good game for Sergt. Jasper, holding the Victory sluggers to three safeties. Standt, the Victory mound ace, was touched freely for seventeen bingles. NATIONAL CIRCLES IDLE.

The National Circle Unlimited Nine is seeking a game for Sunday. Manager Willie Andrews of the Circles is seriously ill. Call Lincoln 9892 to arrange for the game.

S. R. O. Sign Is Out Early; Ruth Deserving of Credit

even tried to view the games from the rafters above the fans but "John Law" stepped in and turned "thumbs down" on this idea.

Just before play started, the "sun god" parlors in left were almost filled while every one of these seats was occupied before the second inning of the opening contest was completed. Twice in the early innings, play had to be stopped, in the first when some fans overflowed from the right-field pavillion and were chased back, and again in the alien second when the same thing happened in left field.

Meanwhile, there was a mob on the outside of the park storming the gates, and it was decided to make room for this gang by putting a ground rule in effect and stretching ropes from the corner of the field boxes in left to the flag pole in center. This was the first overflow crowd ever in the Stadium since the left-field stands were built several years ago.

Ruth Deserves Credit In These Days.

Babe Ruth must be given credit for his gameness in continuing in action despite the recent loss of the fingernail on the third finger of his right hand. When it is considered that most present-day players "baby" themselves almost enough to disgust one, the Bambino should be placed in the hero class.

Manager Bob Shawkey made a change in his line-up, which probably will be in effect throughout the present series. As Jimmy Reese had not been going particularly well at second he was benched, Lazzeri shifted from short to the middle sack, and Westling given the berth between second and third.

Pitcher "Sad Sam" Jones is now the proud possessor of a pair of 2-months-old foxhounds, given to him before yesterday's game by Herb Pennock, Yankee flinger.

Miss Carstairs Drives Boat at 70-Mile Speed

Gravenhurst, Ontario, July 4 (A.P.). Miss Marion B. Carstairs, British hope in the Harmsworth trophy races at Detroit attained a speed of 70 miles an hour today with her speed boat Estelle IV in a test on Lake Muskoka. This boat is the slower of her two challengers for the trophy.

The trial was the first for the Estelle IV since it was redesigned and conditioned last winter. The boat behaved remarkably at high speed, casting little spray. Miss Carstairs expects to drive her first string boat 100 miles an hour in the Detroit races August 28 to September 1.

Since the death of Sir Henry Segrave in a speed test recently in England Miss Carstairs is the sole British hope in the international speed classic.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

AN analysis of fan letters received by Station WBAL, Baltimore, in what is called the "baited" mail, shows that 46 out of every 100 listeners want something for nothing, if by merely spending a 2-cent stamp they can procure same. Usually it's "please send me So-and-So as announced during your program last night," and practically nothing else.

As a rule, the writer "enjoyed the program," but apparently, uppermost in the minds of these 46 per cent of listeners is the desire to get something for nothing.

Baltimore, by the way, is just beginning to get "Amos 'n' Andy."

Scotland Yard, the internationally known London police headquarters, will enlist the aid of radio in tracking criminals.

ASSERTING that the NBC has "a large part of the choicest broadcasting facilities," Representative Ewin L. Davis, of Tennessee, declared:

"Of the 40 cleared channels, which are the only broadcasting channels upon which stations are authorized to operate with 1,000 watts power or more, stations receiving the National Broadcasting Co. service are operating on 27 cleared channels; these stations embrace practically all of the high-powered stations.

"The approximately 550 broadcasting stations not on these cleared channels are crowded together on the remaining 49 broadcasting channels, 12 of which channels are shared with Canada; the result is that, generally speaking, such stations are so crowded together and so interfere with each other, and are so blanketed and heterodyned that they can rarely be satisfactorily heard. The result is that the air is dominated by their chain programs."

Although apparently not widely discussed, "The Lady Next Door" (WRC, 5 p. m) is said to be one of their popular programs.

"Any substitution for this program would bring us a deluge of telephone calls," said a station official. "Therefore, we disturb this feature as little as possible."

IN addition to the new "Pop" concert series starting tonight (WRC, 7 p. m.), the station's audience will be given another new program, "The Silver Flute," following (WRC, 8 p. m.).

The antitrust radio speech of former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, which caused such a hub-bub when it was suddenly cut off by Eastern stations because of a mysterious "S O S" call has now been made into a record.

The recording was said to have been done at the request of stations which were cut off, also from independent stations, which wish to rebroadcast the speech from the disc.

WITH the new radio telephone from the Vatican City to the United States completed and a modern high powered broadcasting station being built for his personal use by Marconi all that is now left for the Pope is to say the word.

Radio telephone service may also soon span the Pacific, first to Hawaii then maybe to Japan and the Philippines. For this purpose the A. T. & T. have applied for permission to build a $1,000,000 station in California as a starter.

Ray Perkins, the announcer, grew restive while waiting for an elevator in a New York skyscraper, and suggested to a friend that time could be saved if the elevators were stationary and the building was moved up and down.

Dare Interprets the Mode

Just cute kids in smart summer togs that we have seen at Deauville.

Paris, July 4.

HOW children do express their mother's good taste—or bad taste! Chic youngsters have chic mammas, too fussily dressed ones are invariably a reflection of a mamma who loves bon-bons, whipped cream, ruffled sofa pillows, and vapid boudoir dolls.

Of course, I know that it's a problem of its own particular kind to keep two or three, or even one youngster, dressed up just the way you want to keep them. What with the way that they wear out clothes, or grow out of them. Really, unless you have all of the money you want to spend on them, there isn't anything to it but what you must take a dress-making course and learn how to sew their little things.

It's fun, truly. And you can manage to express so much individuality that way, have your own youngsters be the best dressed ones in the neighborhood—and at very little expense. Or, if you have a nurse for them, have her attend the sewing course and make their little things, perhaps.

There are some darling French style books of children's styles, that monthly picture what the smart youngster will wear, some that tell you how to sew them, others that just picture the style.

* * * *

And summer right on us, as it were, we have made an illustrated leaflet of all Wee Mamzelle's cute summer resort things, so you, too, can make individual and different things for your petite adorable. Nor is sonny neglected, for he has a couple of little things in this leaflet that you can make for him, too. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post if you would like the leaflet.

For Him.

Not for naught or nothing has Miladi become her most luxuriously elegant self in the evening hours! Her escort must needs follow suit—and that means dress suit in its swallow-tail-ingest elegance. With the permissible exceptions, of course, of summer resort and intimate dinner wear, when the tuxedo is more correct.

For both the dress suit and the smoking dark blue materials are smart, and lapels of shiny satin. The shirt should be of linen, with a softly pleated front, square cuffs slightly starched, and a formal collar rather high and open.

* * * *

There is a great deal of shirring going on in the feminine mode—and I like it! Chiffon blouses are often completely shirred, sometimes loose shirring draped about the figure, sometimes with shirring stitched down at regular intervals.

A frock may have form-fitting shirring at the waistline and shirring on the skirt a little below the knees to make fullness. Very unusual and charming are the effects being achieved on both satin and chiffon materials in this way!

* * * *

Have you sent your stamped, self-addressed envelope for the brassiere leaflet which tells you how to make the cleverest brassieres you ever saw? If not, you'd better send it today.

* * * *

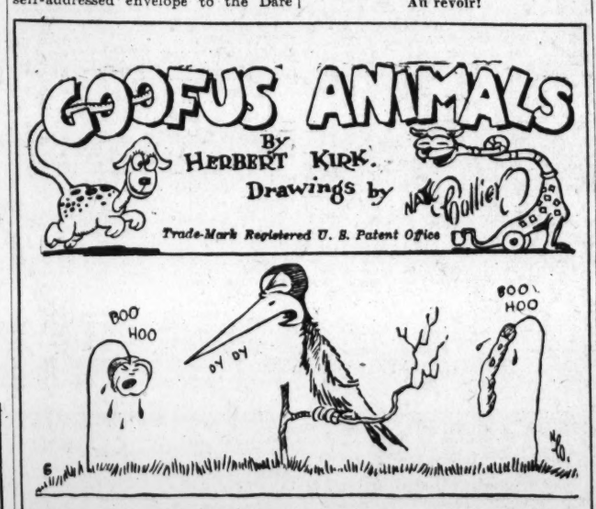
Au revoir!



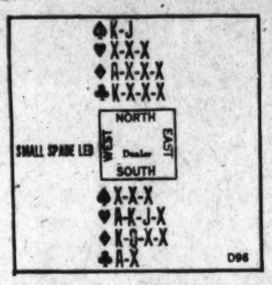
Love in a Goofus Garden

How sad is the Goofus Tomato
How sad are the Goofus Stringbeans
They grieve for the Goofus Woodpecker
Who has overeaten it seems.
All the Garden loves the Woodpecker
For he's rid it of beetles and slugs;
A sort of insecticide love match—
A passion based solely on bugs!

WORK ON BRIDGE

(This article is intended for the Auction and Contract Bridge beginner.)

Suppose with the hand that follows you held South's cards, that you were the Declarer, and that small Spade was led by West; which of the two Spades held in dummy would you play?



The answer to this question depends entirely upon the contract whether No Trump or Hearts; it might be either with the above holding.

An inexperienced Bridge player is apt to wonder why dummy's play should depend upon whether the contract is a No Trump or a Trump; dummy and closed hand holding the same cards in both cases, and the same small card led. The answer is that the leader opens his hand differently against different types of declaration, and it is to meet these different openings that the selection from dummy is varied.

Against a No Trump, the opening is a small card from a long suit headed by ace; but against a trump, the Ace is the accepted and conventional opening. This does not mean that an Ace should be led from an Ace-suit against a trump declaration every time the leader has such a suit; but it does mean that rarely, if ever, should he lead small from a suit headed by an Ace. Knowing this the Declarer shapes his play accordingly.

When playing a No Trump, with a small card led, and with King-Jack in dummy and no winning card of the suit in closed hand, the dummy play is little better than a guess, as the leader may have opened an Ace-suit or a Queen-suit. There is a slightly greater chance, however, that the lead has been from an Ace-suit and therefore the King should be played. But playing against a trump contract the lead is not from the Ace, and the Jack is the card for dummy to play; the lead is apt to be from the Queen, and when it is the Jack play gains a trick in the suit.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me how to get rid of ants on peony plants. The buds are simply covered with these insects. M. F. S.

If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to send you the name of a proprietary preparation that will enable you to get rid of aunts.

Will a day lily that is somewhat shaded by trees bloom? I have moved the plant to a southern exposure, but still it refuses to bloom. What do you advise me to plant in a second-story window box on the northern side of my house? M. L.

Day lilies grow best in a moderately rich soil where a good supply of moisture is available. The ground should be prepared to a good depth and enriched with manure. They grow in either sunlight or shade, but as a rule do best in partial shade. I would suggest that you give your plants some liquid manure or bonemeal. Also see that they are well watered at all times. Begonias and English ivy will make an attractive window box for a northern exposure.

Please tell me how to improve a rather dejected aspidistra plant. The leaves are brown and wrinkled. I frequently wash the foliage with cold, soapy water. The plant has been recently transplanted, so I know it is not potbound. Last year I transplanted my lilies of the valley, using bonemeal before setting the bulbs. This year they failed to develop flowers, though the foliage is quite healthy. E. H. B. M.

Better keep your aspidistra in a sunny location on your porch. Water it every day. It will likely soon recover in the open. Your lilies of the valley will no doubt bloom next season. Give them an application of bonemeal this season. You can supply it at any time.

Please suggest the aftercare of an Easter lily. The leaves are all yellow, though I am still watering it. M. E. P.

Remove the dead tops from the plant and plant the bulb in a sunny place in your garden. It should bloom in the late summer.

I have a number of peony plants which have not bloomed for two years. Please tell me how to treat them. MRS. J. G.

Peony plants should be transplanted about once in nine years. Keep them well watered at all times. See that grass and weeds are not growing in close proximity to their roots; also give them several applications of bonemeal or liquid manure this season. With such treatment they should bloom next year.

Please tell me the name of the shrub from which I am inclosing a few leaves. MRS. MARIE L.

The twig you inclosed resembles deutzia.

Please tell me the name of a plant of which I am inclosing a branch. MRS. E. L. H.

Asparagus sprengeri. This plant demands a warm, humid atmosphere in winter and a sunny location in summer. Keep the roots quite moist at all times.

What Today Means to You

"CANCER."

IF JULY 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9:15 a. m., noon to 1 p. m. and 5 p. m. to 6:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 5 a. m. to 6:30 a. m. and 10 p. m. to 11:30 p. m.

Astrological influences have not changed on this date—prayers and desires will be answered, if you accept the answers. Treasures are still hidden, and you must dig if you find them. Beneficial to health. Do not be careless with letters.

The child born on this July 5 will have a gentle and kind disposition; a reserved and controlled nature, but will be sociable and friendly—also popular. Literary ability is shown, and it will be an inveterate reader. It should have good health as regards nutrition and digestion.

You have natural gifts and marked ability, but you are lacking in ambition and have little "push." It is so easy for you to slack, and to let your talents go to pieces for lack of hard work. You are satisfied with half their economic value, or to remain without "accomplishments." You have a quiet and reserved nature, a quick and short temper, an impatient disposition and are rather distrustful.

Difficulty is shown in acquiring or retaining wealth, although the latter part of your life shows prosperity and success. If you have children, they will be the cause of many discords in your life, and financial losses. They will be of little comfort to you, except in your advanced years. The signs do not counsel marriage for you, and hold out little happiness therein. Servants will always be a source of worry to you. Your imperative need of friendship and attachment constantly impels you toward new scenes and relationships, although disillusionment will usually follow each new association.

You have a sensuous, but refined nature, and you have a very clean mind. You have a much stronger character than appears on the surface; you rather try to impress others with superficialties—you do not put your best foot forward. Fight against your jealousies.

Successful people born July 5:

1. David G. Farragut, first admiral U. S. Navy.
2. Phineas T. Barnum, showman.
3. Henry C. Murphy, lawyer; proprietor Brooklyn Eagle.
4. William C. Whitney, lawyer, of New York.
5. Joseph B. Foraker, United States senator.
6. Horatio Southgate, P. E. clergyman; bishop of the dominions of the Sultan of Turkey.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Those Long Engagements.

DEAR Miss McDonald: I think I know the answer but mother thought I ought to ask you and so here goes. Five years ago I met and became engaged to a very fine boy. I still say so and always will. He is finishing college and asked me to wait. After three years I was very tired of the situation, but he was not making much headway, and evidently was as fond of me as ever. So I still waited.

At last, after five years, when I was plainly losing interest, he asked me if I would be willing to marry and work for a year. By this time all my friends had married, and I thought it was better that way than dragging on forever, so I said yes. We made our plans. I wrote to my cousin and told her and asked her to be my bridesmaid, and to come on for a visit. This was at Easter. Well, she came. I had not seen her in four years. He had never met her. She was to stay two weeks and then visit one of the friends who had married. After three days, she told mother she had word from this friend, and must go there sooner than she expected. But mother got the truth out of her. She did not want to be around, for she had "fallen" for my fiance. Mother tried to laugh her out of it but she was terribly nervous about it. She insisted upon going. I could not even "get" it as it was a long time since I even thought about him that way.

Well, that night when he came in his face was wreathed in smiles, until he heard that Edna had been "called away." Then I saw, and so did mother, that whatever happened was mutual. I asked him if he thought we were doing the wise thing in marrying. He said he did not know what to say. I asked him if he felt sure no other girl would ever appeal to him as I once had. He objected to the phrase "once had." Then he told me that when he saw Edna he just "got a homesick" feeling and then after awhile "unearthly happy" and then so "peaceful" and then all of a sudden she was "gone like a dream."

Now, I am no weakling. And I am not hard on the eyes and will never be left on any Christmas tree, but isn't this an awful break after missing all the high jinks of the wonderful years of 18 to 23? Just waiting like a fish to have this instead of a wedding gown? Of course he says it must pass, and we should go on with our plans. But where do I come in with a bridegroom ready to go "all homesick" for the first girl who comes along? Although, to be fair, I really believe it is the real thing. Anyway, I do not want him. I could yell, I'm so mad, but do not want to marry him. What do you say?

MILDRED.

Right you are, Mildred! And mighty fine and game and fair! You do not want the lad, and 23 is just about the age when things begin to happen that are really worth while. High jinks are good exercise for adolescence, but do not mean much beyond that, so what you have missed in that direction is more than offset by what you have gained in more valuable world experience. No "high jinks" could ever have rendered you so capable of accepting and even understanding so trying a situation as the one that now confronts you. You are able to accept it because you do understand it. And—just between ourselves, Mildred, dear—you understand, because you, too, as well as the nice lad, have fallen "out of love." You sense the fact that it might have been you instead of him who beheld a face and went "homesick!"

Well, Mildred, that is why we "oldsters" are always upset when the very young pick a "life" partner! They know nothing about life, and less about partners!

In a year you will have forgotten your present stress, and just the memory of a dear and valuable friendship of five years will remain.

Take that as gospel from one who has survived half a dozen engagements and still lives to tell the tale!

This column is for you! Your experiences, opinions and suggestions will help those in need of advice. You need not sign your name.

PARADE AND GAME MARK FESTIVITIES IN WESLEY HEIGHTS

More Than 100 Children Take Part in Celebration of Fourth of July.

RAISING OF FLAG OPENS PROGRAM AT CLUBHOUSE

Fireworks Display and Dance Close Crowded Slate of Activities.

Residents of Wesley Heights celebrated the Fourth of July with a community program that started at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and continued until 1 o'clock this morning.

Following a flag-raising ceremony directed by Roy C. Miller and participated in by the Boy Scouts of Wesley Heights, at the Wesley Heights Community Clubhouse, there was an extensive program of races and games. On the campus of American University, a baseball game was played between teams made up of men living on the north side of Klingle street and those on the south side. The finals of the Wesley Heights tennis tournament were held on the club courts.

More than 100 children marched in a costume parade at 4 o'clock under the direction of Mrs. Winfred Johnson, while in the evening there was an elaborate fireworks display in the big field adjoining the club, and at 10 o'clock informal dancing was started in the clubhouse on Forty-fifth street northwest.

South Side Team Wins.

The South Side Team won the baseball game with a score of 11 to 8. Complications arose in the third inning when a mob stormed Chester Caywood, who was umpiring, and threatened to lynch him. Capt. Charles H. Bremmerman, of the Fourteenth Precinct, sided with the spectators, who insisted that the umpire was the legendary villain of baseballdom in the flesh and placed Mr. Caywood under arrest and substituted himself as umpire for the rest of the inning.

The line-up for the winning South Side team was John H. Yates, p.; Carl Mitman, c.; L. V. Hartley, 1b.; R. C. Miller, 2b.; J. L. Barnhart and John Williams, ss.; Lynn C. Edminster, 3b.; Gregor McPhearson, cf.; F. Wright, rf.; and Fred W. Rade, lf. The South Side team included Ned Graham and Dr. Guy Leadbetter, p.; George Carll, c.; Charles Boetler, 1b.; Homer Elmers, 2b.; James Noland, 3b.; Paul Shorb, ss.; Cecil Wilkinson, lf.; Harmon Pardoe, cf.; and Dr. Raddick, rf.

Prizes for Events.

John Ladd, once captain of the George Washington University tennis team, defeated Dr. S. Herrick on the courts in the men's singles, 6—4 and 6—2. The woman's singles were won by Miss Pyle, who lost the first set 5—7 to Miss Catherine Shoemaker, but captured the two following sets with scores of 7—5 and 6—0.

Prizes for all of the athletic events were donated by merchants of Washington, while W. C., and A. N. Miller this year contributed the fireworks, all other expenses of the celebration being borne by the club out of its funds.

First, second and third places respectively in the various events were won as follows: Race for boys under 12 years, Joe Zirkle, Dick Wright, Frank Balsley; race for girls under 12 years, Vi Zirkle, Rosemary Nolan, Betty Ballou; race for boys under 6 years, Walter Johnson, Jimmy Roberts, Bobby Pyle; race for girls under 6 years, Rosemary Nolan, Ann Nichols, Agnes Proffit; race for boys under 16, Roland Waddell, Spencer Howell, Barry Townsend; race for girls under 16, Frances Knapp, Margaret Wood, Caroline Barkalow.

Winners of Contests.

Prizes for the children's events, all of which were 40 yards, were awarded immediately, while prizes for the adults' races, which were of the same distance except the sack race, which was 30 yards and return, were presented at the clubhouse in the evening. The winners of the adult events were:

Men's free-for-all-dash, Charles Boetler, Fred Green, Spencer Howell; married women's free-for-all dash, Mrs. Ethel Rommel, Mrs. Edith Shoemaker, Mrs. Mary Lane; single girls' free-for-all dash, Dorothy Townsend, Caroline Barkalow, Caroline Shoemaker; sack race for men, Fred Green, Roy Rommel, John H. Yates; egg and spoon race for women, Caroline Barkalow, Mrs. Henry Ralph, Mrs. Laurie Garrett; fat men's race, C. H. Pardoe, James Nolan, Ned Graham; nail-hammering contest for women, Mrs. Edith H. Pardoe, Dorothy Townsend, Mrs. George B. Woods; three-legged race for men, Spencer Howell and M. Davenport, Harrison Knapp and E. Daly, B. Townsend and B. Waddell.

Hoop-rolling contest for women, Mrs. Mary Lane, Betty Pyle, Mrs. Harrison Jacobs; crab race, Roy Rommell, Philip Herrick, Harrison Knapp; baseball throw for women, Caroline Barkalow, Dorothy Townsend, Miss Titus; mixed needle and thread contest, Catherine Shoemaker and Howard Nichols, Mrs. Edith Shoemaker and Roy Shoemaker, Dorothy Saunders and Robert Saunders.

Children's Parade Features.

The crowning event of the afternoon was the children's parade, in which the youngsters formed at Forty-fifth street and Cathedral avenue and marched to the clubhouse. Many of the costumes were symbolic of the occasion, but others showing equal originality were derived from various lands and classes of humanity.

"Miss Wesley Heights" was impersonated by little Ann Howell, in a fetching costume of green leaves. The three Hildreth youngsters, Jean, David and Richard, were outstanding with their own circus wagon, a true-to-life replica of a gaudy cage wagon, with the three children riding on top and a ferocious woolly dog doll securely chained within the cage.

Uncle Sam was there in the person of young Beverly Barkman, and S. Booth Miller was seen as a grand Colonial dame, and Barbara Kenney as a Red Cross nurse. Tom Hume, jr., was a realistic Cupid. Anne Nichols and Mary Jane and Betty Dawson were a trio of ballet dancers, while little Betty Ballou was garbed as a nun. In contrast to these was little Billy dim Starke as a pirate, and, on the other hand, David Proffit was "The Perfect Lady."

Steve Hopkins wore a firecracker costume, while John Harkman, as a policeman, was there to prevent any of the other youngsters from touching a light to David's fuse. Young Walter Johnson was attired as the Great Art (Whataman) Shires. Others were dressed to represent Japanese, Dutch, Spanish, French, Belgian, Gypsy, Scotch and Hungarian boys and girls, or various walks of life such as cowboys, soldiers, and the like. After the parade the youngsters enjoyed refreshments at the clubhouse.

GLORIOUS FOURTH BRINGS CROWDS TO COMMUNITY CELEBRATIONS

Two Prisoners Memorize Ritual of Independence

Youths in Police Court Learn How to Avoid Charges; Both are Sentenced to Study What Fifth Grade Has to Offer. They Will Then Go Free.

In the old days, school teachers used to penalize bad children by making them write the Declaration of Independence. Yesterday in Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt used the same Declaration as punishment, but instead of making the errant ones write it he made them read it before permitting them to go free.

And the punishment was timely, since it was the Fourth of July, and the two defendants—George Kirksey and Thomas Williams, both colored—were charged with shooting off firecrackers. Judge Schuldt decided on the unusual punishment when he learned that the latter had never heard of the famous proclamation, while the former admitted "It means nothing to me."

Kirksey was the first to face the judge, and after pleading guilty tried to excuse himself with the statement that he didn't know it was wrong.

The judge then elicited from the youth that he was from Easley, S. C., and that he had quit school after going through the seventh grade, and asked if he had ever studied the Declaration.

"I suppose so," Kirksey responded, still smiling.

"Well, said the judge," I sentence you to go to the Congressional Library, look at the document and to read it very carefully."

At this point the probation officer told the court that copies were in the probation office.

"Well," said Judge Schuldt, "Kirksey, you go into the probation office and read it over very carefully and then come back, and if you know more about it then than now I'll take your personal bond."

Williams told the court that he did not know it was wrong to shoot firecrackers. It developed that he was from North Carolina and quit at the fifth grade.

Asked directly, "What is the Declaration of Independence?" he replied, "I never heard of it."

"Well, you join the class, too."

When Judge Schuldt quit the bench both boys were still poring over the Declaration, and the judge instructed the probation officer to release them when they finished.

BOY SCOUT, 12, DIES WHILE IN SWIMMING

Suffers Heart Attack as He Enters Water at Burnt Mills, Md., Camp.

RESCUE WORK IS FUTILE

Arthur Dewey, 12-year-old Boy Scout, yesterday met his death in an unusual swimming accident at the Boy Scout Camp at Burnt Mills, Md.

The youth had been eating roasted potatoes and then went swimming. He is believed to have died just after striking the water at the camp swimming hole. Very little water was forced from his lungs by the Kensington Rescue Squad, and County Officer Joseph Nolte, who administered first aid.

Dr. W. A. Shannon, of Takoma Park, pronounced the boy dead after firemen and police had worked on him for more than an hour in a vain effort to restore breathing. His death was caused by heart failure.

The Dewey boy and his brother, Alton Dewey, both of Rosslyn, Va., had been at Camp Woodrow Wilson for several days at the scout camp. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Dewey, of Rosslyn.

Sergt. Guy L. Jones, of the Silver Spring Substation, Montgomery County Police, called the Kensington Rescue Squad and the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department. Both were at the Kensington fire carnival, but made record time in reaching the scene of the supposed drowning.

Chief Marion Curran, Edward Magruder, Alfred Warthen, Robert Graves, George Sauerwine and Richard Price, all members of the Kensington Rescue Squad, worked over the boy for more than an hour, as did Officer Nolte.

The body was taken to Rockville by W. Reuben Pumphrey, jr., Rockville undertaker. No inquest was deemed necessary, Dr. Shannon having signed a certificate of accidental death.

The Dewey boy was a member of Troop 56 and was an ardent scouting enthusiast.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

LUELLA was nervous as a kitten. Merely the striking of a match, when I lighted a fragrant Havana, almost made her jump from the chair out the window.

"Whatsamattah with you?" I asked.

"My nerves are all on edge——"

"Yeah? What did that?"

"I think it was the Fourth——"

"The fourth what?"

"The Fourth of July."

• • • •

SO that was it. By George, I don't blame her. It was terrible out our way, bombs bursting in air—like an attack on the western front.

"There ought-a be a law," said Luella.

"There is a law——"

"Well, why don't they enforce it?"

"Ah, Luella, now you ask a question."

Luella's first sample of patriotism came in the early morning when she was preparing breakfast. Some boy came up under the window and exploded a minnenwerfer. It sounded like the crack of doom. Luella dropped the coffee pot. Next door a fellow let loose a cannon. Wham! Two pictures fell off the wall. Across the street a good man, and true, started sending up sky-rockets, just as the dawn was breaking. It was probably what broke the dawn—and my ear-drums.

"Well," I said, hoping to sooth Luella's nerves, "this is the grand old spirit of Independence Day. It comes only once a year——"

"For which we should be thankful," she sighed, and I upbraided her for a lack of patriotism.

"It isn't a lack of patriotism," she declared, "so much as an aversion to noise."

• • • •

POOR Luella. She was shaking like a leaf. Just when she settled down, sort of conquered her rebellious nerves, a small boy over the way let loose another charge, left over from Independence Day—a detonation, an explosion of such force that it rocked the Old Manse to its very foundations. When I recovered from the shock Luella had disappeared. Good gracious, thought I, the gal's been blown out of the house. Soon I found her—under the divan, scared almost to death.

"Next year I'll know what to do," she said, sobbing.

"What?"

"Go to a hospital—where they have a gone of quiet."

Over there the ambulance siren will do the work.

CONSTABLE KILLED IN HIGHWAY CRASH

Companion Seriously Hurt as Auto and Truck Collide Near Laurel Track.

MACHINE DEFECT SEEN

Frank Brown, 53 years old, Laurel, Md., constable, was fatally injured, and William Halverson, 36 years old, also of Laurel, was critically hurt about 12:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon when their automobile crashed head on with a truck near the entrance of the Laurel race track.

Witnesses told Prince Georges County police that the automobile was going on the left-hand side of the highway toward Washington when the collision occurred. It was believed that something may have been wrong with the driving apparatus The truck was operated by James Williams, of Savage, Md.

The two injured men were taken to the University Hospital at Baltimore by an ambulance of Eugene Kaiser, Laurel undertaker, after they had been treated by Dr. Bryan T. Warren. Brown was pronounced dead on arrival, while Halverson was found to have sustained a fractured right leg, a broken nose and possible spinal injuries.

Mark Willie, in front of whose garage the accident happened, told Maryland Policeman C. C. Serman, who investigated, that he believed the truck driver was blameles, as he saw the constable's automobile on the left side of the road. There was little traffic at the time.

Dr. Germanus J. France, automobile coroner, of Baltimore, was notified of the acident late yesterday, but he had not indicated whether he will call an inquest. Brown's body was taken to the Baltimore morgue.

Burroughs Citizens Society Sponsors Parade, Games During Celebration.

LIEUT. BUTLER SPEAKER

The Burroughs Recreation Park at Twentieth and Otis streets northeast was dedicated yesterday with an elaborate Fourth of July celebration under the auspices of the Burroughs Citizens Association.

The program was featured by a dedication ceremony, preceded by a parade through the community headed by prominent officials and a military band. A children's section, including Boy Scouts of the community, was a feature of the parade.

Lieut. F. B. Butler, assistant director of the office of public buildings and parks, was the principal speaker at the dedication ceremonies. The ceremony was followed by flag raising exercises, accompanied by the national salute by the 260th Coast Artillery, District National Guard.

An old fashioned picnic, athletic contests for young and old, baseball games, rolling pin throwing and baby events occupied the afternoon program.

A picnic supper, followed by a band concert and fireworks, completed the program in the evening.

The Brookland Citizens Association and the Rhode Island Citizens Association cooperated with the Burroughs Association in staging the program.

Two Jail Inmates Just Walk Away

Officials Are Looking for Pair Who Left Without Saying Good-By.

Independence Day was taken literally by two inmates of the District Jail. Lawrence Dowe and William J. Millen, who were spending a few days as the guests of the District, caught the spirit of Independence Day, and walked from the place.

Both violated a code of etiquette by neglecting to inform their hosts that they were leaving. Jail officials failed to find any notice of their departure and are anxious that they return.

Millen is 45 years old and gave a Four-and-a-half street address. Dowe, who is 27 years old, gave his address in H street near Second northwest. Both were taken to the jail after being convicted of intoxication. Dowe was on a ten-day visit and Millen was to stay a month.

TAKOMA PARK FETE IS HOLIDAY FEATURE

Pageant and Parade Form Part of Celebration by Citizenry.

FLOATS ARE HISTORIC

Pageants, parades, athletic events and music featured Takoma Park's celebration of the Fourth of July yesterday. Following the pageant and parade, which started at 9:30 o'clock from the intersection of Carroll and Denwood avenues, patriotic exercises were held on the grounds of Takoma Park Trinity Episcopal Church, under supervision of Dr. Horace W. Whittaker, general chairman of the community celebration.

The program included selections by the United States Army Band, solos by Miss Dorothy Skinner, solos by C. Wilfred Smith, an address by the Rev. R. Paul Scherrer, pastor of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, and community singing. The invocation was given by the Rev. William E. La Rue, pastor of the Takoma Park Baptist Church. Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. B. F. Ryan, pastor of the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

An exhibition tennis match preceded a double-header baseball game on the District Line diamond, featuring the Takoma Tigers and the Silver Spring Club. At 8 o'clock in the evening an elaborate fireworks display was given on the Takoma Park municipal playgrounds.

The 31 floats in the parade depicted various historic events in the history of the Nation. Heading the parade was an escort of mounted police, followed by the Army Band, the color guard, a detachment from Walter Reed Hospital, a squad from the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the general celebration committee.

The Victory Post Drum and Bugle Corps of the department of the District of Columbia and the Review and Herald Bands participated in the parade.

OLDEST INHABITANTS URGE DISTRICT VOTE

Independence Day Program Featured by Demand For City Rights.

E. F. COLLADAY SPEAKS

Independence Day was celebrated by the Association of Oldest Inhabitants yesterday with an earnest demand that the District be accorded the same rights of independence as were won by the rest of the Nation in 1776.

Addressing members of the association at the Epiphany Church Parish House in a Fourth of July program, Edward F. Colladay declared that while giving praises to the Declaration of Independence people of Washington should remember that they "are entitled to its benefit, and pledge themselves uncessingly to continue the struggle for representation and let us hope that the time may not be far distant when we shall truthfully say that the Declaration of Independence applies to the Capital as it does to the rest of the Nation."

Mr. Colladay pointed out that the Declaration of Independence contained "the solemn announcement that governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed," and declared that "the principle thus stated will not be honored as a whole truth applying to all Americans until we of the District of Columbia are accorded the right to participate in the making of the laws which we are called upon to obey and in the election at least of the President and Vice President."

The program opened with an invocation by the Rev. Calvert C. Buck, of the Episcopal Eye, Ear & Throat Hospital, and included vocal selections by Mrs. Thelma Selinger Klein, reading of the Declaration of Independence by Fulton Lewis, an original poem by John Claggett Proctor and the reading of extracts from the records of the House of Burgesses of Virginia, in which it was declared that "No power on earth has the right to impose taxes on the people, or take the smallest portion of their property without their consent, given by their representatives."

50 Barrels of Mash Ruined When Kerosene Is Put Into Mixture.

One of the largest liquor stills captured here in months fell into the hands of Fifth Precinct Sergt. J. P. Dalhouse and Detectives F. L. Arrington and T. M. McVeary last night in a raid on a Tenth street house near B street southeast.

The apparatus was of 200-gallon capacity. It was found with 50 50-gallon barrels of mash, which were ruined by police with the adulteration of kerosene.

Police said a tip had been received recently that liquor was being made in the house and that it had been under surveillance since. Except for the barrels and still the structure was vacant.

PETWORTH CITIZENS CELEBRATE HOLIDAY; ANSELL IS SPEAKER

Concert Given by Elks Boys' Band; 21 Guns Fired as Flag Ascends.

Citizens of Petworth community celebrated the Fourth yesterday with a patriotic address by Brig. Gen. Henry T. Ansell, flag-raising exercises, a baseball game and concerts.

Gen. Ansell urged his audience to disregard the fact that the Constitution is a document more than 150 years old and to observe it instead as the code for governing modern everyday life.

He declared that there "can never be any such thing as world peace," but asserted that the Nation should take precautions to guard against the danger of war from within rather than from without, pointing out that the great wars of history have resulted from internal rather than external conditions.

"Stick to" Constitution.

However, Gen. Ansell continued, the country need never fear the influences of any "isms" so long as it "sticks to" the Constitution and practices its precepts. Referring to the constitutional rights of the people, he pointed out that inasmuch as the people name their own representatives in the government, if those representatives fail to fulfill their trusts, the blame rests primarily upon the erroneous judgment of the voters.

A salute of 21 guns accompanied the flag-raising ceremony at Sherman Circle by Boy Scouts of the community troop.

The baseball game and field events at Job Barnard School attracted many entrants and spectators, and particular interest attached to the horseshoe pitching contest, sponsored by the Petworth citizens. Teams from Grant and Sherman Circles crossed bats at 2 o'clock in a game attended by several hundred fans and won by Sherman Circle, 8 to 5.

Horseshoe Pitching Contest.

There were 36 entrants in the horseshoe pitching contest, which was won by J. D. Hall.

At 5:30 p. m. the Elks Boys Band of 42 pieces gave a concert at Sherman Circle. Following the benediction at 6:30 o'clock, the band played until 7:30.

In touching on the significance of the date, Gen. Ansell spoke of the courage of the early settlers of the Nation, and urged exemplification of their principles of citizenship.

Charles I. Stengle, chairman of the Petworth Citizens Association, was in charge of the celebration. He was assisted on the committee by Christopher Lehmkuhl, Earl W. Cooper, John E. Hamill, Edward S. White, I. M. Lavine, George W. Potter, John Carroll, J. B. Tisinger, D. W. Moore, E. H. Bailey, jr., and Ollie Viehmyer. The invocation was delivered by Rabbi Morris Levine.

CAMPBELL RETELLS FINDING BAKER GUN IN HUNT FOR CLEW

Authorities Check "Loose Ends" in Attempt to Get New Facts.

DETECTIVES CONFIDENT OF ULTIMATE SOLUTION

Conference With Kelly and William Gloth Takes More Than Hour.

Herbert M. Campbell, Arlington County real estate man, who produced the gun believed to have fired the fatal bullets into Mary Baker, was yesterday closeted with detectives in the Arlington County Courthouse and rehearsed the story of the discovery of the gun in his office at Oak Crest, Va.

Detectives, after the conference, said that Campbell enabled them to check "loose ends" of the story. Lieut. Edward J. Kelly, of headquarters, and Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth, questioned Campbell for more than an hour in an attempt to refresh the latter's memory on the incident of the gun's recovery.

Campbell's evidence regarding the gun gave the sleuths a fresh start on the case and they are more than confident that the case will now be solved. Detectives did not say whether any new evidence was recovered as a result of the inquiry.

In the group which talked with Campbell were Lieut. Kelly, Mr. Gloth, Detective Sergt. John Fowler, District ballistic expert and an Arlington County officer. At the conclusion of the conference Lieut. Kelly said he was merely making a "check-up" of certain details regarding the gun recovery in an attempt to unearth additional facts.

Herman H. Barrere, World War veteran, who is being sought by detectives, has eluded the police to date in their international quest. Barrere had access to the Campbell home, from which the murder gun is said to have been stolen.

Policeman T. J. Calk, who arrested the Negro, testified that he had watched the man for a number of months and that he was unemployed. Investigation, however, disproved the statement and the sentence was passed

Man Apologizes for Bother To Court and Wins Freedom

Apologizing profusely for causing the court any bother, James Goodwin, colored, former member of the Ninth United States Cavalry, won his freedom in Police Court yesterday before Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

Goodwin pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkeness and declared he had just drunk a little too much wine. He stated that he had run into a few of his Army friends Thursday night and that they had enticed him to do a little celebrating.

"Don't you know you shouldn't let people lead you astray?" asked Judge Schuldt.

"Yes, your honor, I know it, and I'm truly sorry. Honestly I didn't intend to bother the court and I apologize for doing so," Goodwin replied. Goodwin also promised that he would not be led astray again.

"All right," said the udge, "the court accepts your apology and takes your personal bond not to repeat the offense."

Goodwin then raised his right hand while Joe Byrne, the clerk, recited the ritual: "The court takes your personal bond not to drink any more wine."

'Where's That County Seat'? Prisoner Tells, Goes Free

Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court yesterday morning professed his ignorance of Virginia geography when he took the personal bond of James Friendly, Negro, who faced the bench on a drunkenness charge.

Friendly admitted that he had been indulging too much in stimulants, but said he was just being friendly. Asked where he hailed from he responded: "King George County, Va."

"What's the county seat?" asked the judge.

"What's that, suh?" asked the prisoner.

"Where's the courthouse?" a court attache interposed.

"Oh!" said Friendly, "King George County Court."

"Is that where it is?" asked the judge.

"Yas suh!"

"Well, maybe you are right at that—I'm a little rusty on my geography. The court takes your personal bond."
